Ruth Hanna McCormick.
A Giant in These Days.
Bees as Detectives.
Money Goes to Money.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, April 8.

TODAY Illinois has the opportunity to send an intelligent woman, Ruth Hanna McCormick, daughter of the late Mark Hanna, to the United States Senate.

From the selfish point of view, Illinois should elect Mrs. McCormick. She knows everybody, has influence, intelligence, great industry, and as senator would get for her state more practical recognition than any man nominated could get.

From the point of view of decency the men of Illinois should be glad to honor an able earnest woman, honoring at the same time the women of their own family, their mothers and sisters, by sending Mrs. McCormick to the Senate.

PRIMO CARNERA, who does no training 48 hours before a fight, made a social call, accompanied by his able manager, Leon See, nephew of the famous Dr. See, physician to the Emperor Napoleon Third.

It is impossible to exaggerate the bigness of this young Italian giant who will fight Mr. Neil Clisby, Negro, tomorrow. He bends over to avoid hitting electric lights hanging from the ceiling, smiles a pleasant Italian smile and asks "Pour quoi." "Why," when asked if he ever loses his temper.

VERY obliging, he takes off his coat, rolls up his silk shirt sleeve and bares his right arm.

You know how Michel Angelo, seems to exaggerate the power of the human body, notably in his Sistine Chapel paintings.

Carnera exaggerates Michel Angelo as much as the latter exaggerates reality.

CARNERA who speaks no English, speaks French extremely well in addition to his native Italian, and is studying English.

You know his measurements, height six foot seven inches, weight, 275 pounds, chest 12 inches bigger than Dempsey's. His hand is about half the size of a typewriting machine and the arm, big and powerful in proportion. His biceps are a little big for boxing, which calls for development of the driving muscles, not of the lifting muscles.

In Carnera's case it doesn't matter. He probably could knock down any boxer by swinging his arm and slapping him on the back.

THE young Italian is proud of his country, as he well may be. Speaking of endurance, he said modestly:

"The Italian nation has endurance inherited from the Romans. Six hundred years ago we had Dante. Now, six centuries later, we produce our great leader, Mussolini, and Marconi. Who knows what Italy will produce 600 years from now?"

PROHIBITION agents observing honey bees flying straight in one direction, coming back zig-zag, the worse for wear, discovered a large whisky still. This column suggested that honey bees might help prohibition agents.

M. M. Levand, owner of the Wichita Beacon, telegraphs:

"Vice squad here tried out your honey bee theory, and it worked. Led police raiders to liquor still. Mailing you copy of Sunday Beacon with full details and pictures. Believe you have discovered solution of wet problem."

IT WILL take more than honey bees to solve the wet problem. You must persuade tired business men to respect the Constitution and the liquor law among other laws.

White mice, highly sensitive, were used in the trenches to detect poison gas before men could perceive it.

If bees could detect the presence of whisky stills and lead prohibition agents to them, that would be interesting. But it would not end bootlegging.

"MONEY goes to money," said the old French peddler, leaving his ten thousand francs to the head of the Rothschild family.

The Fox Company, after a determined fight, goes to Halsey, Stuart, able bankers, and to the A. T. and T., short name for the American Telegraph and Telephone Company, which with four billion dollars of real property, is probably the Mount Everest of our high finance.

The winners admit that William Fox gave them a hard fight, with the Wall street smash against him.

SCORPIONS near Durango, Mexico, are unusually venomous. Their poison makes a serum to counteract their sting.

Entire families of Durango are hunting scorpions, for the Mexican Health Department, which pays two and one-half cents (American) for each live male scorpion, five cents for each female, the lady scorpion being far more poisonous than her husband. This fact in natural history will appeal to some prosperous American exhusbands, now paying alimony.

President Judge Evans Asks Retirement; Park Leading Candidate for Prosecutor

The elevation of District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner to the Common Pleas Court bench and the retirement of President Judge John E. Evans from the same court were reported today as possibilities of the near future. First Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park is said to have the inside track for Gardner's position.

Gardner would succeed the late Judge Richard W. Martin. Judge Evans announced today that he had sent a letter asking Gov. John S. Fisher to retire him on April 30. The Governor has replied, asking for more information.

APPOINTMENT EXPECTED

In political circles, the appointment of Gardner had been expected, inasmuch as he was one of three attorneys whose names were submitted to the Governor by the Bar Association after a special election. It is said the appointment probably will be made Thursday.

The Common Pleas judges will name Gardner's successor. Park is said to have the inside track, although Attorney William H. Coleman is well supported. Two other names have been mentioned for the district attorneyship, Wil-

Suit Quiet

FRANCES WILLIAMS

LOVE BALM SUIT ACCORD SEEN

A tentative agreement has been reached in the $100,000 alienation suit against Frances Williams, blonde star in George White's Scandals, Attorney Louis Little, Mrs. Jones' legal adviser, said today.

The suit, filed by Little in behalf of Mrs. Bertha Jones, of this city, charged that the singing star had alienated the affections of Alan Jones, husband of the Pittsburgh woman, now playing the piano in "Fifty Million Frenchmen."

"Winchell to the contrary, we haven't reached a final agreement," Little said, "although Mrs. Jones may go to New York later in the week to confer. I couldn't say how much settlement we expect to get, because we haven't got it yet."

Attorney Little's reference to "Winchell" was inspired by Walter Winchell's comment on the case in his column "On Broadway" appearing in today's Sun-Telegraph.

A legal representative of Miss Williams spent several days in Pittsburgh, Little admitted.

GANG KILLING FEAR TOLD BY WIDOW

Victim of Barrel Murder Marked for Death by Rum Ring, Questioning Reveals

Mrs. Alberta Gregory, 21-year-old wife of the barrel murder victim, William J. Gregory, returned to Pittsburgh today from Akron, O., where she had been found following a widespread search after her disappearance from her home on the North Side.

Her husband told her before his murder that he feared Phillip Fasio (or DeFazia), one of the men held in connection with the slaying, she informed detectives. She was questioned on her husband's activities with a bootlegging ring alleged to have been headed by Fasio. This bootleg band killed Gregory, detectives say they believe, because he had "double-crossed" the other members.

GARDNER TO ACT

Other developments in the case today were:

1—District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner announced that authorities have sufficient evidence to hold Fasio for the coroner in connection with the murder.

2—Judge James R. Macfarlane set tomorrow afternoon for hearing on habeas corpus writ sought by Fasio's attorney for his release.

3—Police questioned James Melano, alleged beer runner associate of Fasio, in Bellevue Police Station.

WIFE IDENTIFIES BODY

Mrs. Gregory was then questioned at county detective head-

GANGS STEAL AND SMASH TWO CABS

Violence in Squirrel Hill, North Side and Dormont Follows Service Extension

Violence broke out in Squirrel Hill, North Side and Dormont today in the taxicab drivers' strike as service was extended to sections beyond the downtown area.

In four attacks, three drivers were beaten up and two cabs were stolen and smashed, but later recovered.

A gang tossed Driver Edward McDermott from his cab at Canal and Anderson streets, then sped away in the cab, which they abandoned on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks near River avenue when they saw police approaching. They intended to drive the cab into the Allegheny River, police thought.

DRIVER UNCONSCIOUS

Driver W. R. Jingerly, 26, told police he was beaten and left unconscious in Hobart street by three men who stole his cab and abandoned it in Murdoch street with its radiator and two windows smashed.

Jingerly said he had just taken a woman passenger to a Hobart street address when the three men attacked him.

E. R. McDonald, 35, Yellow Cab driver, reported that four men attacked him in Wainbell avenue, Dormont, smashed the windows of his cab and sped away in their own auto. McDonald received a fractured wrist and body bruises, he said.

DOZEN MEN CHASED

A fourth attack was reported by Motorcycle Patrolman A. E. Rhea, but police stations had no report of it. Rhea said he had chased a dozen men who were believed to have attacked a cab and its driver at Thirtieth street and Liberty avenue.

None of the cabs operating today had deputy sheriffs, and Sheriff Cain said the deputies had been removed at request of the Parmelee Transportation Company.

There was one report today that 400 strikers were ready to return to work, their only recent objection having been the presence of deputies on the cabs.

Orders were issued by Assistant Superintendent of Police Benjamin R. Marshall this afternoon for all policemen to watch for the occupants of two automobiles said to be cruising around the city molesting taxi drivers.

EPITHETS FLY AT LOBBY QUIZ

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP.)—In a session marked by the bitterest personal exchanges that have occurred since it began sessions, the Senate Lobby Committee today heard a Senator call a witness a "coward" and the witness, an Alabama newspaper editor, retort that the senator, Black, of Alabama, was a "liar and a contemptible cur."

The committee room was crowded with spectators drawn by the appearance of Josephus Daniels, North Carolina newspaper publisher and Democratic leader. But it was the appearance of another newspaperman, J. E. Pierce, editor of the Huntsville, (Ala.) Times, which developed the fiery argument that threatened to end in a personal clash.

Pierce's testimony in the Muscle Shoals lobby investigation was interrupted by Daniels' appearance. After the former secretary of the Navy had told how he wrote an editorial in his paper demanding the resignation of John J. Raskob as Democratic national chairman because of his anti-dry activities, the committee switched from pro-

The three statesmen agreed on earlier replacement program for light cruisers and destroyers.

While these conversations were going on Foreign Minister Briand of France, arrived in England, and will meet with Premier MacDonald at the House of Commons later in the day.

The British prime minister answering a question in the House of Commons, declined to give assurance that he would enter into nothing less than a five-power treaty at the naval conference.

"But," he added, "as I have frequently informed the House, the government is still working to secure a five-power agreement."

hibition back to Muscle Shoals, and Pierce resumed the stand.

QUIZ ANGERS EDITOR

Senator Black (Dem.), who is not a committee member, inquired about a check for $1,000 that had been sent to Pierce by J. W. Worthington, secretary of the Tennessee River Improvement Association.

Pierce said it had been set him for expenses in his advocacy of the bid of the American Cynamid Company for Muscle Shoals.

The editor became angry at Black's inquiries, accused him of insinuations and then shouted heatedly that they were "a contemptible lie."

The senator's face flushed a fiery red, and he shouted:

"I'll see you outside about that. Everybody knowns you are by nature a coward."

Pierce sprang to his feet immediately and roared:

"We'll go outside right now."

HEARING IN UPROAR

The room was in a furore, and it was with difficulty that Senator Walsh, (Dem.), Montana, succeeded in restoring order. After things quieted it developed that Black had withdrawn his remark calling Pierce a coward. There was no indication, however, that the breach between the man had been adjusted.

Daniels, whose testimony was a disappointment to the crowd, was prevented from answering a query by Senator Robinson, (Rep.), Indiana, as to whether the editorial demanding that Raskob quit his post expressed his personal views.

He did, however, testify he thought the Democratic chairman should not keep his post while retaining membership in an organization that urged the election of wet Republicans. Raskob had testified he was a director of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, had given $65,000 to the organization, and that it advocated election of anti-dry congressmen irrespective of party.

RECORDS WITHHELD

Senator Robinson asserted just after the hearing ended that a committee investigator had been denied access to records of the anti-prohibition association. The senator, asserting the committee has the power to subpena records, indicated he intended to get them if possible.

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP.)—Maj. Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition, today declined to comment on charges of Senator Robinson, the association had refused its records to the Senate Lobby Committee.

NARCOTIC BILL PASSES HOUSE UNANIMOUSLY

Sponsored by the Hearst Newspapers, Measure is Strong Curb to Dope Evil

By KENNETH CLARK,
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—By unanimous vote the House has passed the Porter narcotics bureau bill, sponsored by the Hearst newspapers.

A roar of "ayes" swelled from the floor when, after a brief debate, Speaker Longworth put the question.

The bill provides for separation of narcotics and prohibition enforcement, appointment of a commissioner of narcotics by the President, and sets up a scientific method for determining the medical requirements of the country for narcotic drugs.

STRENGTHENS LAWS

Passage of the measure, Representative Porter (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, told the House, will greatly strengthen the narcotic laws and make them the most effective of any in the world.

At the same time, Porter sharply criticized those European nations which, through overmanufacture of drugs, are flooding the United States and the world with an endless stream of dope. He said:

"It is recognized by every student of this great problem that no nation standing alone can suppress the illicit traffic. The drugs which are illicitly brought into the United States are manufactured in several pharmaceutical laboratories in Europe, and these laboratories are the fountain heads of all the human misery that follows drug addiction through the use of derivatives of opium and coca leaves.

"The Hague opium convention provides that the manufacture of these drugs shall be limited to medicinal and scientific needs. The agreement is plain and unequivocal. There is no justification or excuse for failure of certain governments to enforce it so far as the factories in their control are concerned."

quarters. Afterwards Chief George Murren announced that she had confirmed stories of others questioned in the case that Gregory before his murder had told acquaintances he feared he was marked for death.

SUSPECT GRILLED

Meanwhile, Fasio had been given an intensive grilling in the Bertillon room at county detective headquarters. He was confronted with the barrel in which Gregory's body was found and with the newspaper wrapping in which the head had been discovered.

Fasio was later taken into court on the habeas corpus writ. First Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park informed Judge Macfarlane that he was not prepared to reveal the evidence held against Fasio and the court adjourned the hearing on a motion for Fasio's release until tomorrow.

Detectives also quizzed Melano, the second man arrested in the case. He told of Gregory's connection with the bootleg ring, but denied all knowledge of Gregory's death.

FRIENDS STILL HELD

Several friends of Gregory also were called for questioning. "Kitty" Jones, a city employe residing in the Twentieth Ward, told detectives he knew Gregory had been associated with Fasio. Mrs. Helen Lightner, her husband, Gaylord Lightner, and Jennings Orr, arrested Saturday when they were preparing to leave the city in Gregory's car, police say, are still being held. Mrs. Marie Wallace, another friend of Gregory, is also being held.

The man named Orr under arrest is Jennings Orr, of 1236 Sheffield street, and not J. B. Orr, a city employe, of 1231 Sheffield street, whose name the prisoner had given, detectives said today.

BIG ILLINOIS VOTE CAST; DISORDERS

Bombs, Attempted Kidnaping In Senate Race Between Mrs. McCormick, Deneen

CHICAGO, April 8.—(AP.)—An army of an estimated 1,500,000 in the 102 counties of Illinois today voted in the first major primary election of 1930. Bitter rivalry for the Republican United States senatorial nomination, especially between Senator Charles S. Deneen and Congresswoman Ruth Hanna McCormick, and fair spring weather combined to draw voters to the booths.

In Chicago 1,297,000 were registered, and 800,000 were expected to vote with nominations for the United States Senate, Congress, State Treasurer and General Assembly, County Offices, Sanitary District and Municipal Court judges at stake.

BOMBING FIGURES

A bombing attributed to political rivalry and the attempted kidnaping of Alderman Sheldon M. Govier, candidate for Democratic ward committeeman, started the day in Chicago and hundreds of armed guards were dispatched to the danger spots to prevent a recurrence of the reign of terror at the 1928 primary, when Octavius Granady, Negro candidate for ward committeeman, was slain.

Morris Eller, city collector and boss of the Twentieth Ward, was one of the first to appeal for help, charging that state's attorney's operatives were cruising through his district intimidating Negro voters and trying to "steal" his election.

Eller opposed Granady two years ago and today was opposed by "Buddy" Jacobson, his former henchman, with whom he was indicted in 1928 for conspiracy in election disorders.

VOTE GUARD BEATEN

Detective squads were busy with frequent alarms from precinct polling places, most of which proved false. Three men lured a policeman from one voting place and then attacked a pugilist who was watching the vote. The assailants used a black jack, revolver and fists.

One vigilant watcher telephoned the election commission that ballot boxes were being stuffed. The detectives found only one ballot had been cast, and removed the watcher.

Ruth Hanna McCormick, seeking Senator Deneen's seat at the Republican primary, cast her vote at her home precinct in Byron, Ogle County. Then she motored to Chicago with her daughter, Katryna, to meet her girlhood chum and staunch supporter, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth. Mrs. Longworth was to arrive from Washington and spend the evening with Mrs. McCormick, receiving the returns.

POSTAL LEASES FRAUD CHARGED

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(INS.)—The government's contracts for rental of post offices at a cost of $18,000,000 a year are replete with "fraud, misrepresentation and corruption," it was charged in the senate today by Senator Blaine, (Rep.), of Wis., in sponsoring a resolution for a senatorial investigation.

A few moments later, Senator Nye, (Rep.), of North Dokato, indorsed the proposed inquiry and charged the system hid a scandal "smelling to high heaven" and "worse than Teapot Dome." He joined with Blaine in demanding a full investigation of all the contracts.

The rental situation was first revealed a few weeks ago by Representative Maas, of Minnesota, who charged there had been "fraud and corruption" in the leasing of a building in St. Paul, Minn.

Nye startled the Senate by announcing that a Senate committee investigator named Alexander M. Fisher, died two years ago under what we consider suspicious circumstances while investigating postoffice leases for the congressman. He gave no details on Fisher's death.

MERGER MEET IN 2ND RECESS

for the merger of Sheet and Tube and Bethlehem Steel Corporation. Judge Turnbaugh said he might render a decision some time today.

INJUNCTION DENIED

The suit filed by B. R. Shoser, of Pittsburgh, Mr. Cleveland asking merger proponents be restrained was overruled.

Proponents of the merger will need approximately 800,000 votes to approve it. Eaton Claimed the the proponents do not have enough to accomplish their purpose.

Attorneys for the opposition announced they will contest every vote on shares purchased since the merger was announced. They said such purchases constituted payment for proxies, and because the purchasers can pay a high price, they have the advantage over other stockholders. Prices paid for some of the shares were reported to have run as high as $180 a share.

In view of this new angle to the contest it appeared that the stockholders vote would not be announced for several days

Policeman, Hurt in Plunge Down Bank, Gets Man

Patrolman Edward Crowley, of East Pittsburgh, dived down a six-foot embankment, fell and was injured painfully, but he got his man. Crowley, his head swathed in bandages, today was confined to his home, while Kinley Wilson, 33, Negro, of Sixth street, Braddock, his prisoner, was in the East Pittsburgh lockup pending a hearing.

Union Railroad Company authorities called Acting Desk Sergt. Samuel Whitman, of East Pittsburgh police, last night asking that policemen be sent to the railroad to arrest a man riding an incoming freight train.

Lieut. David Bennett and Crowley responded. Wilson jumped to the ground and ran upon sighting the officers. He disappeared down an embankment and Crowley jumped after him. The patrolman tripped over a wire and fell. Wilson was subdued after a struggle.

Crowley was given treatment at the police station by Dr. Albert Rosenberg, of East Pittsburgh.

HIGH SPEED AIR TESTS BALKED BY NAVY

International News Service

WASHINGTON, April 8.—A strange story of how high naval officers tried to send him "to sea" all during his famous trials with high speed racing planes was unfolded today by Lieut. Alford J. Williams, Jr., the Navy's "speed king," at a hearing before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, which is investigating his resignation as well as the position of the United States as compared with other nations in the development of fast pursuit and bombing planes.

Williams testified that he was able to conduct his experiments in high speed planes only through the enthusiastic support of Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of naval aeronautics. Without Moffett's support, Williams said, he would have been shipped to sea and the experiments in high speed planes abandoned.

Williams revealed that when he first sought Moffett's aid to develop a racing plane for the Navy, the admiral was forced to consult with bureau chiefs who interposed objections.

Williams explained there was no aviation training in going to sea until after the aircraft carrier Langley was launched in 1922. Then he said, efforts were redoubled to send him to sea but Moffett blocked them all on the ground that development of a racing naval plane was of vital importance to the national defense.

He asserted it took him two months to get permission from the Navy to revamp his defective Mercury speed plane last fall, after repeated attempts had failed to raise the plane from the water in tests for the Schneider Cup races.

PARDON WON BY PLEA OF DYING SON

Wounded Soldier's Appeal Gains Comrade's Help For 20-Year Prisoner

Saluting the little white cross above the grave of his soldier son in the Italian burial ground in Altoona today, Rocco Cerrullo, 55, pardoned wife murderer, paid public thanks for his deliverance from the Western State Penitentiary, where he had served more than 20 years of a life sentence.

Beside the liberated convict stood several officers and soldiers, veterans of the One Hundred and Tenth Infantry, comrades of Louis Cerrullo, the ex-convict's son. They told how on a fiery slopes of the Marne on July 15, 1918, Louis, a machine gunner, fell mortally wounded.

The dying soldier's last words framed a message to his father expressing the belief that the parent was insane when he had struck down his wife. Louis urged his comrades to seek a pardon for his father. A few weeks later news came from the Austrian front that Daniel Cerrullo, the prisoner's younger son, had been killed while fighting in the Italian army. Louis' body was brought home and reinterred beside the grave of his mother.

Gen. Richard Coulter and other officers were instrumental in seeking Cerrullo's pardon.

Cerrullo left the penitentiary shortly after dawn today and accompanied by Parole Officer William E. Gaffney, proceeded to Altoona. Later he went to New York where he will embark tomorrow for Italy.

Cerrulo was overcome as he breathed the free air outside the prison. From his son's war risk insurance he has already received more than $3,000 and forwarded more than 40,000 lire to Naples.

Never before had he ridden in an automobile. He crouched in a corner as the car whisked through the downtown streets.

Bobbed hair, short skirts, motor buses, traffic lights, policemen in puttees were sights that excited his wonder.

The most amazing thing to him were the strange noises, his ears being more confused than his eyes.

The sea storm struck inland yesterday afternoon, when a heavy rainstorm was swept over the North Atlantic coast by a 60-mile gale. Two deaths in New York were indirectly attributed to the storm and a man was blown off a tug in Newark Bay and drowned.

GARAGE FUMES KILL TWO

Five rescue teams, with inhalators, labored in vain to save the lives of two of three men, found overcome by carbon monoxide early today in the garage of Casimir Emala, 6034 Hoeveler street. A third victim is in a serious condition in Homeopathic Hospital.

The two, Raymond Kane, 26, of 7300 Idlewild street, and Louis Skwinski, 21, of Harmar street, were pronounced dead by physicians after two hours' efforts at resuscitation had failed.

The third victim, Leonard Williams, 25, of 735 South Aiken avenue, brother-in-law of Emala, was unconscious when taken to the hospital.

Emala told police that he, Kane and Skwinski had helped Williams, a chauffeur, repair his car, last night and afterward all went to Emala's home. Kane and Skwinski were to go with Emala in his car this morning to the Twenty-eighth street shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad, where the three are employed. They decided to sleep in the garage. Emala discovered their plight at 7 a. m.

They are believed to have started the motor to operate the heating system on account of the cold.

SON OF GANDHI SENT TO JAIL

BOMBAY, India, April 8.—(AP.)—While some of his chief lieutenants have been arrested and his son sentenced to six months' imprisonment for breaking the salt laws, Mahatma Gandhi, Indian Nationalist leader, has yet to be molested by the police in his civil disobedience campaign.

The Mahatma, who began the campaign by the illegal manufacture of salt on Sunday, produced salt again today, but there were no police at the scene near the village of Aat, on the Gulf of Cambay. A crowd of about 8,000 had gathered in the belief that Gandhi might be arrested, but when no attempt was made to interfere with him, the throng dispersed.

Advices from Surat said that Ram Des Gandhi, son of Mahatma, had been sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment for breaking the salt laws at Bhimrad. Four companions were given similar sentences.

Some of Gandhi's chief lieutenants have been sentenced to imprisonment for breaking the salt laws and inciting others to do so. Marwari Jawnalal Bajaj, wealthy Bombay follower of the Nationalist leader, was sentenced to two year's imprisonment. Several other prominent leaders also were arrested.

Report from New Delhi said seven persons were injured at Shahdara during a clash between police and volunteers supporting the civil disobedience campaign.

Grimes Still Home Town Hero, Despite 'Rebuke'

By GEORGE SHRADLE,
Staff Correspondent.

MINERVA, O., April 8.—Burleigh Grimes, Pirate pitching ace, though he lost his suit for divorce and was rebuked by Judge Harvey F. Ake for coming into court "with unclean hands," still is Minerva's outstanding citizen.

From bank president to the school boys the diamond star remains their Burleigh. This as the sentiment expressed today. Some of the town's leaders said the pitcher could find financial aid if he needed it in his plans to appeal from the court's decision.

L. A. Grunder, president of the Minerva Savings and Trust Company, declared Burleigh's character above reproach, his word "as good as his bond."

R. C. Smith, of the Smith Dry Goods Company and civic leader, said at least 95 per cent of the little town respected Burleigh and called him their friend. Burleigh's fondness for the youngsters was an outstanding characteristic cited by Dr. L. E. Casey. That virtually every business man would be willing to give any support necessary was the opinion of Dr. Joseph B. McHenry.

The pitcher recently addressed the high school pupils on athletics and clean living. W. F. Bonar, superintendent of schools, said he would have no hesitancy in inviting the twirler to speak again.

So Minerva continues to greet the star as Burleigh and wish him good luck.

Defense of Flag Held War Cause by Vet Leader

Defense of the flag has been the cause of all wars in which the United States has been concerned, declared Maj. A. B. Hay, commander of the Union Veteran Legion, in an address yesterday at the observance of the anniversary of the Battle of Shiloh by the Pittsburgh Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy. It was not state rights or slavery, but the fact that the secessionists at Charleston fired upon Fort Sumter's flag that caused the war between the states, said Maj. Hay.

It is beautiful altruism to think of America stepping in to save the starving Cubans, he said, but he pointed out that the Cubans probably would be starving yet if the Maine had not been blown up in Havana. He asserted that the thirteenth anniversary of the entry of the United States into the World War brought a change concerning the views of Woodrow Wilson's ideas of democracy, and it is agreed now that vengeance for sinking American ships caused America to disclaim neutrality and rally her millions of men to the cause of the Allies.

FIELD REDUCED IN VOTE RACE

HARRISBURG, April 8.—(AP)—Expiration of the time limit for withdrawing nominating petitions last night narrowed to some extent without materially simplifying the contests facing Republican voters of Pennsylvania over nominations to major statewide offices.

Republican ballots will contain the following names of candidates to be voted on throughout the state:

United States senator: Senator R. Gilmdy Bristol, Francis Shunk Brown, Philadelphia; Joseph G. Herben, Philadelphia; Thomas W. Phillips, Jr., Butler; Gifford Pinchot, Milford.

Lieutenant governor: Charles F. Armstrong, Leechburg; Charles Dorrance, Scranton; Edward C. Shannon, Columbia; Frank P. B. Thompson, Philadelphia.

Secretary of internal affairs: James F. Woodward, McKeesport; Philip H. Dewey, Victoria; Frederick A. Godcharles, Milton; Charles C. McLain, Indiana; Charles Ervin White, Coatesville.

Justice of the Supreme Court: Albert Dutton, McDade; Chester; George W. Maxey, Scranton.

Judge of the Superior Court (two to be nominated): J. Frank Graff, Kittanning; William B. Linn, Philadelphia; James T. Drew, Pittsburgh.

Lieut. Gov. Arthur H. James announced he would withdraw from the race for the place. The State Supreme Court bench to be vacated by retirement of Chief Justice Robert von Moschzisker because his withdrawal was requested by William S. Vare.

Others on the Davis-Brown ticket are Brig. Gen. Edward C. Shannon for lieutenant governor; Dewey, for secretary of internal affairs, and Judges Drew and [illegible] for the two places on the Superior Court.

Senatorial candidates will run alone for the nomination to the Senate as will also Worth Garfield Drew, Democratic treasurer of Bradford. The other senatorial candidate, Bitner, is linked with Phillips for governor and Dorrance for lieutenant governor on an anti-ticket.

Former Gov. Pinchot will run for governor with Armstrong for lieutenant governor, Herben for governor and White for secretary of internal affairs constitute an all-Negro ticket.

Sues Man, Then Loses When She Marries Him

WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—Mathematics of the defendant could not avert Miss Sophie K. Spector from pressing a damage suit against him, only a court decision could do that.

She discovered, a suit against Max E. Weisman for minutes she said she received while riding in an automobile with him. A crowded court docket intervened and before the case came to trial they were married.

Weisman had the case dismissed, but Mr. Weisman appealed from the dismissal.

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals ruled that the right to recover in a suit depends on the relation of the parties at the time of judgment and not at the time of institution of the action. As Miss Spector's suit had not been reduced to judgment before marriage it must be dismissed.

Westmoreland Man Enrolls for Pinchot

GREENSBURG, Pa., April 8.—Elliott L. Hibbs, of Greensburg, president of the Westmoreland County Commissioners' association, announces he will support Gifford Pinchot for governor at the May primary.

PHILLIPS STAYS ON BALLOT

PHILADELPHIA, April 8.—(AP)—Last minute efforts to persuade Thomas W. Phillips, Jr., anti-prohibition candidate for the Republican nomination for governor at the May primaries, to withdraw failed.

Randolph W. Childs, state campaign manager of the anti-prohibition ticket composed of Phillips for governor, Francis H. Bohlen for United States senator and Charles Dorrance for lieutenant governor, last night issued a statement at the conclusion of a conference in his office that Phillips intends to remain in the fight.

It was reported that a "figure of national importance" was present at the conference as a representative of the ticket headed by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis for senator and Francis Shunk Brown for governor, in an effort to persuade Phillips and his running mates to withdraw. Others attending the meeting were Robert Kelson Cassatt, R. L. Montgomery, Horace Binney Hare, Lewis Paxson and Raymond Pitcairn, members of the anti-prohibition campaign committee.

Phillips declared in a statement at his home in Butler that he was in the fight to the finish and Pitcairn announced that if former Governor Gifford Pinchot, also a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, was successful the anti-prohibitionists would take the field with a full ticket at the November election.

Four Held in Raid At Punxsutawney

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., April 8.—Two places were raided and four arrests made Sunday night when police descended upon a pool room known as "Pedro's" and the home of Miss Emma Sesco.

Ritchie Seeking Fourth Term In Maryland

BALTIMORE, April 8.—(INS)—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie was busy today conferring with party leaders and whipping his organization into shape following his announcement yesterday he will be a candidate for renomination for a fourth consecutive term as chief executive of "the free state."

Ritchie pledged he would continue those policies which safeguard most and interfere least with the just liberties and well being of our people."

The Republicans have yet to announce their candidate. Rumors are current Mayor William F. Broening, long known to have gubernatorial aspirations, might toss his hat into the ring.

LEADERS SPLIT ON ASSEMBLY

Local leaders today will begin slating candidates in the Republican primary for Congress and the State Assembly from those remaining after the expiration of the withdrawal period yesterday.

The principal local withdrawals reported yesterday were State Senator M. G. Leslie, candidate for re-election from the Thirty-eighth District; J. M. Magee, candidate for Congress from the Thirty-fifth District; J. M. Morin, candidate for Congress from the Thirty-fourth District, and Theodore Doehla, candidate for state senator from the Forty-second District.

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, Republican county chairman, and Mayor Charles H. Kline, leading the city organization, will have separate slates in a number of legislative districts, judging from recent maneuvering.

CONTROL SOUGHT

Armstrong is expected to seek control of the Allegheny County delegation in Harrisburg, and Kline is reported to have an identical ambition in order to frustrate any legislation that might upset his administration.

Congressmen S. G. Porter, of the Thirty-second District; Clyde Kelly, of the Thirty-third, and G. E. Campbell, of the Thirty-sixth, probably will be indorsed by all factions.

Congressman P. J. Sullivan, of the Thirty-fourth District, is opposed only by P. J. O'Malley, of the state auditor general's office, due to the withdrawal of former Congressman Morin.

COYNE AIDS O'MALLEY

Sullivan's friends said he would be supported by Armstrong and Kline, while O'Malley was reported to have the backing of State Senator James J. Coyne, Republican city chairman.

The withdrawal of former Congressman Magee leaves Stanley Carrington as the remaining Republican opponent of Congressman H. A. Estep. Carrington expects to get support from the independents, including followers of former Gov. Pinchot. Estep was said to have been indorsed by Armstrong and Kline.

Senator Leslie's withdrawal left two aspirants to succeed him, Joseph G. Armstrong, Jr., son of Commissioner Armstrong, and P. F. Riley, supported by Kline.

State Senator Herman P. Brandt, who is seeking re-election with the reported support of the Republican organization, has two principal opponents, Park Martin and D. P. MacQuarrie, who are expected to appeal to dry voters.

EINSTEIN UNOPPOSED

State Senator W. D. Mansfield, of the Forty-fourth district, has no serious opposition and probably will be slated by all factions.

More than 150 candidates remain in the race for the 27 vacancies in the General Assembly from the 13 legislative districts of Allegheny County, and the slating in that field will occupy the attention of leaders for some time, it was said.

William H. Ziefel, chief clerk to the County Commissioners, yesterday opened headquarters in Hotel Henry for the Davis-Brown campaign in Allegheny County. Headquarters for other western counties have been established in the William Penn Hotel.

S. C. Jamison, of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association, yesterday opened headquarters in the Pittsburgher Hotel for Senator Joseph R. Grundy's Western Pennsylvania campaign.

He conferred there with Senator Coyne, local Grundy leader. Jamison announced that Grundy would visit here later in the week.

PINCHOT HERE TOMORROW

Former Gov. Gifford Pinchot, candidate for another term, is expected to arrive here tomorrow and to remain in this vicinity for three days during which he will fill the following engagements:

Tomorrow—Luncheon meeting with Butler County Committee at Hotel Nixon, Butler, and deliver a speech at night in McKeesport.

Thursday—Meet Beaver County leaders in the Brodhead Hotel, address employes of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company in East Pittsburgh at noon and broadcast over KDKA at 8 p. m.

Friday—Address employes of Westinghouse Air Brake Company in Wilmerding at noon, meet the Washington County committee in the George Washington Hotel, at Washington, in the afternoon and broadcast over WJAS at 8 p. m.

Pinchot is scheduled to leave Pittsburgh Friday night for his campaign in Lycoming County.

'OLD IRONSIDES' BILL SIGNED

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP)—Assurance that "Old Ironsides" again will sail the seas that she once commanded was given in the signature by President Hoover of a bill appropriating $300,000 for the completion of her restoration.

The historic frigate "Constitution," champion of a multiplicity of sea engagements, was refloated on new hull a scant fortnight ago in the Boston Navy Yard.

Funds for this partial restoration, to the extent of $400,000, were contributed by the school children of the country. The money allotted in the measure approved is expected to complete the renovation.

A veteran of naval service, the Constitution, armed with more than 50 guns in its double decks, achieved its first prominence in the destruction of pirates who endangered American shipping years ago on the Barbary coast.

She figured in the War of 1812 and remained on the active list of the Navy as a training vessel until Spanish-American War days. Retired, she lay rotting at a pier in the Boston Navy Yard until sentiment crystallized for her restoration.

CHIEF OF SIOUX DIES IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP)—Chief Chauncey Kills-in-the Bush Yellowrobe, who presided over the tribal ceremonies at the adoption of President Coolidge into the Sioux tribe in the Black Hills, South Dakota, died of pneumonia Sunday, in Rockefeller Institute Hospital. He was 63 years old.

Chief Yellowrobe was one of the first graduates of Carlisle Indian School at Carlisle, Pa. He was 7 years old before he ever saw a white man. Two of his maternal uncles fought with Sitting Bull in the Custer massacre. For many years Yellowrobe was a teacher in the Federal Indian service, conducting schools in South Dakota and nearby states.

He recently announced plans to run for Congress next Fall and was confident that he would be the first full-blooded Indian to sit in the Lower House. He came to New York on a lecture tour.

FOR THE MAN WHO CARES

"Don't Call it Luck"

counsels ELINOR GLYN

Writing to girls of PITTSBURGH

ELINOR GLYN

Helen M—is eating her heart out, poor child because she's so "unlucky." There have been six weddings among her friends and she hasn't even one beau. "Miss Glyn," she writes, "really I am as good looking as these other girls. Can it be their clothes? Yet I buy the same styles as they do and pay just as much—"

DON'T call it luck, Helen. Undoubtedly these girls know something that you don't—that the thing about clothes that has the greatest appeal for men is color. Psychologists say color affects the emotions more than any other factor in dress.

As long as its intensity, its balance, are not upset or diminished, color will work unfailingly on the emotions.

It all comes down, Helen, to these two simple rules:

ONE: Wear the colors which suit you best; and

TWO: Keep those colors fresh and new and vital, just as you keep your things clean and dainty.

The difficulty is that some women use an ordinary "good" soap, but it is not good enough, for just a little of the color pigment goes from the fabric.

But there is a famous product especially made to take out dirt without disturbing the colors. That is the well-known Lux. If a color is safe in plain water alone, sparkling, bubbling Lux suds will preserve all of its original magnetism. Lux has literally brought romance into the lives of many thousands of girls.

ELINOR GLYN.

THE SECRET OF CLOTHES APPEAL

(Right) Washed 12 times with ordinary good soap—printed silk undeniably faded. Not actually ruined, yet allure of color lost.

CITES DIVINE AID IN TAX FIGHT

BOSTON, April 8.—(AP.)—The "Guiding Hand of God" and not any ability on his part was responsible for the fruitful development of a "wild cat" Texas oil field by Edgar B. Davis, of Brockton, from whom the commonwealth seeks to recover an income tax of $380,000 on $6,000,000 received by Davis in the sale of the property in 1926.

This declaration was contained in a statement written by Davis and introduced by the state in its suit now on trial before Judge Webster Thayer in Superior Court.

Davis said he spent his last cent in the Texas oil scheme and that before the end of 1926 he had changed his domicile from Brockton to Texas with the intention of always living in that state. He claims that under the Massachusetts income tax law the tax could not be legally assessed until January 1, 1927. He also maintains that he moved to Texas because of a religious conviction of divine guidance in his oil endeavors and "with deep appreciation of my debt first to God and next to the state of Texas."

The commonwealth contends that Davis has not changed his domicile that he still resides in Brockton and that Davis' family still lives there.

"A SICK MAN HAS NO CHANCE"

Big Hearty Italian Mine Worker Relates Amazing Experience.

No one would ever guess from looking at Peter Gallo, of Ford City, Pa., that he had ever had a day of sickness in his life. He looks as strong as three ordinary men and he is. No one would ever think that until about a year ago he had been a weak, discouraged invalid. Here is his story in his own words:

"I was in good health when I first came to this country. But soon I got catarrh while working in the mines and the catarrh poison spread over my body. The droppings poisoned my stomach and I got no good from food when I tried to eat. For years I was so weak and sickly that I could not do any steady work. My food seemed not to digest and I would swell up after eating and I had to take different kinds of medicine to make my bowels move and I was so short of breath all the time. I had left my wife and baby back home in Italy and I longed to see them. But I could not make enough money to bring them over here or even enough to pay my own passage back. I lost heart entirely and despaired of ever seeing my wife and child again. A sick man has no chance. Nobody wants to give him work and if he gets a job he can't hold it.

"When I was so miserable that I had given up all hope and expected only to die, here, alone, and in a strange land a friend told me about World's Tonic. Ordinary American medicines had never done me any good. But I soon found World's Tonic is different. World's Tonic is compounded of remedies brought from many parts of the world. That is why it is so amazingly helpful to men of different races. To us Italians it is as good as a trip back home.

"I grew better and stronger from the first dose of World's Tonic. At the end of three weeks I got a steady job and I have never lost a day from illness since. Soon I had enough money to send for my family. Now we have a nice home and a fine new baby. I owe it all to World's Tonic.

World's Tonic is on sale at Dow's, Sloan's & Leggett's, Mayflower, and all other modern drug stores. (1)

CHICKIE

CHAPTER LIV

"YOU have touched, Barry."

Chickie

She looked upward, and, reading his eyes reaching down to hers—it seemed so glorious that they should have that warm look for her—she wondered how she had been sad. The weight on her heart lightened. It melted. She was carried along, like a song. Only that he was here—only that he looked at her and was glad.

They were much. For a long while she hear it was as if he'd not a came alone face flush pretty she was. She would have listened

Almost "What happened, Barry."

"Well a few trip to New Orleans. That's about all."

"Oh! Nothing else? Then you didn't get it!" It's not settled. But, why

"It will be. Now don't get panic-stricken. Listen: they can't stall the thing forever. It was all cooked when Moore wired. They were to run a new line of steamers. That would have made it great for me. I'd get a salary and a fee for every case that came up. But the backers got cold feet because the shipping has taken a slump. That can't last very long, you know. Things are picking up right now. I'll get the job all right, but there'll be nothing to it till they open the canal."

He dashed into it breathlessly, a white anxious look on his mouth. She clasped her hands tightly, lowered her eyes. She said nothing.

He leaned toward her, dubiously. "Chickie, listen there are other things. Don't you don't suppose I'll have to go along like this very much longer, do you?"

Chickie Contented

When she couldn't answer because of a parched ache in her throat, he said resentfully: "You think I don't care, Chickie? You think it's my fault?"

"No—oh, no, but how long may it be, Barry?"

He reached across the table and touching her hand suddenly, forced her eyes to his. Their fervor startled her. "Chickie, long—ask me!"

"You mean—" She began to smile.

"Yes! I've said it enough. You ought to know by this time!"

And because his forehead reddened, a flush that was pain and rapture went stealing softly through her thought. She laughed. "Perhaps he loves me!"

"Perhaps he does!"

In this way, without either of them being aware, they drew themselves in a thousand easy ties. Their separation but quickened and intensified the bond between them.

She was surprised because of the peace that came upon her. She spoke of it that night when they drove.

She leaned against his shoulder, her eyes wet. "Barry, now I don't feel troubled. Isn't that strange?"

He pressed her hands. She went on in a dreamy languor. "Why do you think it is? Just because you're here again?"

Wall of Love

"Maybe. Or it might be because here we seem removed from the world. We're alone and only hills and water about. We only need to think of ourselves and this beauty. If I were like this always you would never be troubled.

"I wish we could shut the world out then! Just the two of us."

"We can."

She laughed. "What a big wall of love we'd have to build."

"Get on my shoulders for a brace. And it's late, we'll have to go. Because of you. It will be a wall of reminders and reassurements against each other. No love can cut through that. If you let yourself be pressed down, if you keep building the love hurt each other, you can see what happens. And we don't want that."

She put up her hand and felt his eyes wet. A [illegible] She was the eternal woman, uplifted in her giving because the man was faithful. It was a sacrament that covered her mind of the long balance of reluctance. It championed the freedom she had snatched and that her thought had never sanctioned. It freed her from herself but only that she might be more wholly his.

Happy Together

It seemed to Chickie in those first weeks after his return that the world was indeed shut out. They two were alone running irresistibly to each other on the crest of lighted waves.

She sat at her window and smiled. He came from the shadow and pursed his lips. They hurried into the alley at 5 o'clock, walking to the car together. At night they drove out to the beach or about the hills. Sometimes they went dancing. When he held her she felt his heart thump and her own quivered as though to some piercing music unbearable in its sweetness.

Sundays there were long Indian summer hours. Under the trees they watched the water. They lost themselves in this growing intoxicating sense of possession one in the other.

And she had no longer the tormenting sense of fear. Once when Jenina taunted: "Well, baby—how much longer do I wait for the great and glorious procession?" she answered with light flippance: "Second Tuesday of next week, Janina dear!"

Uneasy at Home

At home this easy assurance left her. She didn't wish to be alone with Jonathan. She hid from the tenderness of his eyes. Once when he ran his palm under her chin, saying with a chuckle: "Pretty as an angel isn't she, mother?" she ran out of the room completely unnerved.

Yet she turned to Jennie. She was all at once concerned because there were wrinkles on the bland forehead. She was curious about her mother. Sometimes she wished to say: "Jennie darling, listen—if you loved, oh the way you did well—" But even in her thought she dared not put that question to Jennie.

One night her mother was mending her stocking as she often did. Chickie said: "That's finished, don't bother with it. I wouldn't wear a thing all runs like that."

But Jennie answered: "Well you may get a turn out of it on a rainy day."

Good Brush Essential

Now that long tresses are once more in favor the hair brush is retrieved as an item of beauty importance. Since there is more of it to be seen, hair must look its best and a good brush is essential in the good-night routine. The brush should, of course, be washed frequently else the hair will not be cleansed by the industrious brushing. If after the brush has been thoroughly washed it is placed under the cold water faucet and tried again it will be found that the bristles will harden and the brush will last longer.

Fay King Sighs for a Pink Gown and Lace, Synthetic Sick Layout

By FAY KING

I HAVE never enjoyed poor health.

I say "enjoyed" because surely the sick friends I have called upon who look so dainty and sweet propped up in pink, on lace pillows, must enjoy the fact that their illness is so becoming.

With me it's a hundred per cent, or a thousand per cent sick. I can look worse with a head cold than my friends do with major operations.

I never have just one of those dainty lace handkerchief colds.

A cold with me is always a cyclone, and toothache puts my face in a class with the dome of the Capitol.

I look so comic I can't even sympathize with myself, and don't want anybody to come and see me.

Katie's Fantastic Theories Stir Madge's Memory

"WHAT'S the matter?" my mother-in-law demanded sharply when I halted and cloaked for our expedition to The Larches she joined me in the lower hall. "You look as if you were seeing ghosts."

I wanted to tell her that I was seeing just exactly that—the wraith of an almost forgotten happening which had come before my eyes while Katie was insisting that something in Marion's room had been the object of the burglary.

Vividly before me was the memory picture of Marion's earnest, excited face as she had brought to my room the old lock box which her dead grandmother had given her and had manipulated the secret spring which disclosed three large, heavy envelopes carefully sealed, with directions that they should not be opened until Marion should be 18.

Not even Lillian knew of the secret of the old sandalwood box contained her young daughter had told me. She believed it to hold simply a few keepsakes which Tom Morton's mother, half senile before she died, had given to the child, and had smiled indulgently at Marion's fussiness over keeping the box safely. But when Marion, leaving for school and unjustly resentful and jealous of her stepfather, had begged to leave the box with me, she had told me that her grandmother before she died had told her that the box contained her "fortune" and had made the child promise that she would not open the envelopes until she was eighteen, and would not let her mother know the secret until then.

"But she didn't know you," Marion had told me, "so the promise doesn't count with you, and I can leave the box with you. I don't trust that man. I don't want it lying around where he could get hold of it."

That animosity toward her stepfather had vanished and the two were now good friends, but Marion had never asked for the box. Indeed, in the excitement of going back to school and in the enjoyment of her new friendships with her roommate, Carolyn Brixton, and Carolyn's attractive brother, Ronald, I do not believe she ever had given her hidden "fortune" another thought.

But I was giving it a number of serious thoughts now. When I first had been entrusted with the "secret," I had been inclined to think the envelopes contained only worthless papers magnified into importance by the senile imagination of an old and feeble woman.

"If you're so upset that you can't answer a civil question," she began tartly, "maybe you'd better—"

"I'm so sorry, mother," I said with the emphatic contrition which I knew was the only pacifier I could offer her mood. "I was upset, but I'll promise not to let my nerves affect my manners again. Are you ready? But I see you are, and there's Jim at the door with the car. I told him to sound the horn when he had the car ready."

"Well, I suppose that's as good as having him track up the place," she admitted grudgingly. "Come along then."

I breathed more freely as I followed meekly in her majestic wake to the driveway, where Jim stood beside the car in the posture of attention in which Mother Graham, after much labor, had drilled him. Perhaps her interest in the object of our drive had diverted her attention from me. But I reckoned without her tenacity. We no sooner had left the driveway behind and were headed toward Bridgehampton, on our way to see the agent of The Larches, than she turned to me with an imperious question.

"Look here, Margaret," she said, "you've found out something about this robbery that's worrying you to death, and that you think you must keep to yourself. Is—it—," her voice faltered, "anything about Richard, Second?"

The Marry-Go-Round

The Sweet and Low-Down

IT APPEARS that the way to be "sweet and feminine" these days is to wear a long, modest ankle-length skirt and keep it pulled up to your knees.

A man will admit that he has "oceans of love" to give—and then balk at the thought of promising to keep it all within the confines of a wedding ring.

No matter how flawless the mate she picked, a woman can always find a way of keeping down his superiority complex by making him feel that she MIGHT have done a lot better, if she had cared to.

One reason why the modern wife spends less time in the kitchen and more time in the beauty shop than her mother did, is because the modern husband insists upon being vamped, while the old-fashioned husband was contented just to be fed. He took his last look at his wife at the altar—and, usually, that was his last look at all women.

Love is a stimulant for the heart, an anaesthetic for the brain and an opiate for the common sense.

Every man likes to think of himself as a primitive and elemental—a caveman at heart—even when he's out trundling the baby carriage or down stoking the furnace.

The ace of diplomats is the wife, who snatches the psychological moment when company is present, to beg her husband to "Tell that GOOD one you told me the other day, dear!"

If a man can acquire a reputation for being "odd" or "different," he can do all sorts of selfish or impertinent things, and still be adored by a lot of foolish women who secretly enjoy being bullied.

SUN-TELEGRAPH

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, April 9

A VERY active day but one not entirely propitious for important interests is foreshown by the prevailing lunar and mutual aspects. While there may be unrest, frustrated hopes, delays and anxiety concerning new projects and employment, yet all things pertaining to writings, publishing and promotion should be under fine impetus for success. Personal affiliations should prove interesting and give gratification.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a very active year, although many of the affairs may be beset with difficulties and anxieties. Labor, employment and new projects may meet with unrest, delays and disappointments, but all pertaining to writings, promotions and publishing should flourish, and also all connected with domestic, social and affectional affairs.

A child born on this day should be particularly versatile and accomplished, but nevertheless may meet with many setbacks and difficult situations to combat in its daily affairs.

-:- Hints for the Household -:-

Some careless person has stacked glasses one inside the other. One of them is sure to be cracked or broken when they are separated, that is, unless cold water is placed in the inner glass and warm water is allowed to run over the outside glass. This is a sure way of averting a crash that would deplete the glassware stock.

To test milk stir it and pour it into a dry tumbler. Then dip into it a clean steel knitting needle. Withdraw and hold vertically. If water has been added to the milk, what is on the needle will run off at once and leave no film or but the barest trace behind.

Some squares cut from odd pieces of linoleum, their corners slightly rounded, make excellent occassional mats to stand on while cooking. Cut some pieces to cover shelves. They only require wiping over with a damp cloth and it is a much simpler way than covering with paper. Tiny odd strips too small for anything can be rolled up, placed on paper and they will then take the place of firewood in lighting the fire.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Science Fast Overcoming Typhoid

DR COPELAND

SCIENCE and medical knowledge have made rapid strides in recent years. They have helped to mitigate the destructive forces of many diseases. Typhoid fever is one of them.

We used to hear very often that an epidemic of typhoid fever was raging, now here and now there. Usually, the epidemics were in the large cities where the water supply had been polluted in one way or another, or the milk supply had been contaminated.

Now, the water supply of every city is carefully safeguarded from pollution. Milk supplies are even more strictly guarded from infection by this destructive disease. Publicity is now carried on by mean of which the public is instructed in preventive measures against diseases. Inoculation by serum prevents, or greatly lessons the violence of the disease.

Typhoid fever is, primarily, an inflammation of certain glands in the small and large intestine. From this seat of inflammation various symptoms develop which are destructive to the human tissues.

It is caused by a well-known germ called "Eberth's bacillus." It was found that the disease could be communicated to animals by injecting a suitable culture of this bacillus. And so it is that inoculation by this method has been of vast service in preventing the disease and lessening its violence.

Germs of typhoid fever may be taken into the human system, not only as I have suggested, but through infected meat, oysters, raw vegetables and other food. The germs may be carried by persons who have had the disease and continue to be "typhoid carriers." It is possible for them to communicate the disease to others, even though they may be immune from it themselves. Cooks, waiters and others who handle foods often give typhoid to others by being carriers of the germ.

It may develop in a few days, or it may take two or three weeks for the disease to appear. In the beginning there is a tired feeling, intense headache, poor appetite, nausea, and often diarrhea. The bones, the back, and the whole body ache violently. There may be nosebleed and chills, followed by sweating.

Then other symptoms appear. There is a devastating fever, as well as other serious complications. In the first week the temperature usually rises one degree daily. In the second week, the temperature remains high, the pulse rate is rapid and feeble. There are delirium, prostration and profound poisoning. In the third week the symptoms may become more pronounced, or they abate.

Typhoid thrives usually where large numbers of people congregate—in camps, colleges and schools, in hospitals and prisons.

Milk brought from one farm may contaminate the milk supply of a large community. In every epidemic of typhoid the milk supply is the first thing to come under suspicion. Pasteurization has been a blessing in overcoming this danger.

Good nursing is of more importance than anything else in this disease. The patient must be isolated and careful disinfection of all the surroundings is important.

In every case, the doctor should determine by examination of the intestinal discharge whether any germs remain in the system, before the patient is discharged. Today every means are taken to prevent this disease. Through much publicity, means of prevention of the disease are available to the public and we hope in time typhoid fever will be a thing of the past.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Greeting the Hostess

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: When a woman caller has been seated by the servant should she stand to greet the hostess as she enters? DOUBTFUL.

YES; it is natural for her to do this.

Gallant Practice

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: Is it proper when you are with a young man friend in a bus for him to get up and give a lady his seat? MARJORY.

IT is proper and manly and gallant and courteous—and nowadays very seldom done. But there are still gentlemen who show this respect to women. And women should encourage them to show this courtesy.

Appreciation for Hospitality

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: When my husband and I are invited out to dinner he thanks the hostess directly after leaving the table. I think it is correct to thank for the dinner and the evening's pleasure when one leaves. Will you please advise me which is correct?

2. If my husband thanks first, what would be correct for me to say? READER.

IT is quite correct for your husband to make some comment on the charming party as he leaves the party. He would not thank for the dinner—one never thanks for the dinner—but might, with an especial graciousness that would make any hostess happy, say: "This is a beautiful party that you are giving, Mary, and I am enjoying every minute of your hospitality" (it would be terrible taste for him to say, "Thank you so much for the excellent dinner, Mary. It was very fine").

However, this mention of his appreciation of the "charming party" after the dinner would not be instead of his thanks when he is leaving, but added to this. When you and he leave, your husband stands back to allow you to say your goodby and your thank you-for-the-delightful-party and then he says his thank you.

2. You say, for instance, "It has been a glorious party, Mary, and you are a wonderful hostess. Thank you so much for asking us."

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN the tired business girl goes out to luncheon and selects an eating place where the jazz band is blatting and hooting she is adding to the day's fatigue. If she is to get through the afternoon's work and not feel older than Eve when closing time comes, she must seek a quiet spot where she can eat slowly and get her frazzled nerves knitted up again. Rush, hurry and noise pull down the forces of resistance. The human machine has a certain amount of endurance; overstrain shows up in one form or another — tired eyes, jumpy nerves, pale lips or facial wrinkles.

SANDALWOOD is the name of the latest tint in complexion powder. It is not as dark as the tan calcimine applied last summer. Three powders are used to compose this mixture, a blue-white which is known as opal, a flesh pink, and a tan which is almost brown. Sandalwood is a pleasant, agreeable tone; it likes blondes and brunets both and they will like it. The proper rouge is a blend of orange and geranium. All of which is not frightfully important except to the trala face-painters. We pass on the message from our special beauty news-agent in Paris.

WHEN the average woman powders her face she starts on her nose. It gets the first full slap of the powder pad, which makes a heavy deposit. All wrong, Mary Anne, all wrong. The makeup artist begins powdering under the chin and works up gradually to the forehead. She uses a flat lamb's wool pad and fluffs on the powder, which isn't rubbed in. The surplus is removed with a soft brush. Dry rouge is put on powder and powder is put on top of the rouge, forming a cosmetic sandwich.

NO woman can afford to be a beauty-slacker. We've heard for ages that health is beauty, but health isn't enough. Health doesn't keep her hair curly or fingernails clean. When a femme doesn't care whether her nose has a dull or polished finish, she is on the toboggan. Scrupulous regard for appearance keeps one set up. Our present civilization demands the perfect grooming. If a woman is a wage-earner and has to lug home the bacon and eggs, not to mention the chocolate eclair, she must be at topnotch beauty standard.

RUMORS come floating over the ocean to the effect that the tight little skull caps with side flaps like hound ears are going to go bye-bye and that bonnets are coming back. Won't that be sumpin? What with peplums and ruffles, the little dearheart should rightly be reverting to bonnets. Fancy the girl with the boyish haircut wearing ribbons under her chin and artificial flowers nestling round her ears! Quaint idea. Still one never can tell.

The Old House

THE old house drowses day by day,
The old house dreams the years away,
Set in wide gardens, cool and sweet,
That screen it from the eager street,
Half-hidden by tall poplar trees
The old house nestles, no one sees
Beyond the rows of hollyhocks
That border on its crumbling rocks.
Serene its mellowed pillars rise
All unprofaned by strangers' eyes.

The old house waits, like some old heart
For those well-loved, who played their part
Within its chambers long ago.
For children whom it used to know
For gallant youth and somber age
Which graced their setting on its stage
As Spring and Autumn, sun and rain,
But out time's ever new refrain
[illegible] to the
[illegible]
[illegible] means
[illegible] grow,
It dwells in days of long ago.

AN OBLIGING BEAUTY DOCTOR

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should try Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 20 years of study.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and help overcome constipation. Take nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes sold yearly. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Music will be from the works of Pittsburgh composers—Foster, Cadman, Herbert, Breil, Zitterbert, Nevin.

A new studio at KDKA is to house announcers making time and weather reports.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

When the chimes failed to work Sunday for the WCAE time announcement, Allan Machesney, chief engineer, displayed ingenuity by striking a fountain pen against a glass partially filled with water. This gave the audience the same sound as the chime.

to the Hall itself do they warm the reason for the lack of cordial greeting. Then they discover Rowley, the younger brother of Rawson's father, occupying Heatherley Hall with his solicitor George. Rawson believes Rowley and George to be impostors, and his establishment of his claim to the title "Baron Rawson, Earl of Heatherley" is set back severely by an unexpected occurrence.

Mothers . . . Watch Children's COLDS

COMMON head colds often "settle" in throat and chest where they may become dangerous. Don't take a chance — at the first sniffle rub on Children's Musterole once every hour for five hours.

Children's Musterole is just good old Musterole, you have known so long, in milder form.

Working like the trained masseur, this famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other ingredients brings relief naturally. It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain.

Keep full strength Musterole on hand, for adults and the milder — Children's Musterole for little tots. All druggists.

Finds Why Food Sours The Stomach

Phyllis Rae Van Strong of 23 W. 61st St., New York, N. Y., is one of the happiest women in the country now. It's not hard to understand why either. She is able to eat again without suffering afterward from indigestion which was caused by a stomach which could not digest rich and starchy food she liked so well. "I love heavy food and my stomach didn't get along at all," she says. "I guess I would be that way yet if I hadn't heard about Acidine. It relieves me quicker than anything I ever heard of. I can take a dose of it and in a few minutes the distress is settled. The gassy sensation goes and so does that bloated sensation in my throat.

"Acidine must have caused the fame of Acidine to spread until more than two million people are already using it. Just think, there's too much acid in the stomach and appetite is gone. Acidine tastes like the taste of Acidine and it costs so little. Get it at any drug store.

Adorable Model for Wee Tot
Pattern 1882
Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

Isn't this a cunning little rig for a smart little miss? The cleverly shaped yoke is most becoming and the inverted pleats afford freedom as well as grace. The frock is sleeveless, but the shoulders are cut to cover the arm a bit. Tiny pearl buttons form attractive trimming.

Design 1882 may be made of printed gingham, percale, dimity, pique, voile, etc. The yoke may be made of the same fabric, or may be of contrasting color as in the sketch. Narrow lace or embroidery gives a dainty finish.

This pattern may be ordered only in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 2 requires 2⅛ yards of 36-inch material and 3 yards of lace.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins carefully wrapped, or stamps, for each pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE wanted.

MOONEY MAIL DRIVE O. K.'D

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP.)—Envelopes bearing propaganda for the release of Tom Mooney from prison may be sent through the mails, the United States Court of Appeals unanimously ruled in reversing a decision of Federal Judge Frank J. Coleman.

Judge Coleman had upheld the action of Postmaster John J. Kiely in barring envelopes bearing the inscription "Pardon Tom Mooney — Innocent. The Horror of 13 Years Unjust Imprisonment." The American Civil Liberties Union had brought an action to enjoin Postmaster Kiely from interfering with the handling of the letters.

In overruling the previous decision the higher court held that the matter complained of was not, on its face, libelous, scurrilous, defamatory or calculated to reflect injuriously upon another.

Mooney is serving a life term with Warren K. Billings, for alleged participation in the bombing of a preparedness day parade in San Francisco in 1916. The Civil Liberties Union is campaigning for his release.

Longworth, Asking First Vacation, Applauded

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP.)—For the first time since the House elevated him to the speakership five years ago, Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, has asked for a three-day midsession rest from his duties.

On rare occasions in the past, Longworth has been away from the House for a day while it was working, but this is the first time that he has absented himself for a longer period.

On both sides of the aisle that marks the middle ground between the two parties, members applauded him as he explained that he desired to leave Thursday for a three-day rest at Aiken, S. C. Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the Republican leader, was designated speaker pro tem.

FIRE PUTS CITY IN DARKNESS

ALTUS, Okla., April 8.—(AP.)—The municipal-owned light and power plant here was destroyed by fire late yesterday, leaving Altus, a city of about 10,000 persons, without light and power and facing a water shortage. The loss was estimated by city officials at $300,000.

Wires were being strung to the high tension lines of the Southwest Light & Power Company, three miles from the city.

The city's water supply was almost depleted by firemen fighting the flames, and Altus will be without water service until the Southwest company's lines can be connected to pumps at the water station.

Jack Little, chief engineer of the plant, suffered burns when he attempted to extinguish the fire.

Daughters Named Officers for G. A. R. Post

DOVER, O., April 8.—Because only four of the seven living members of Ricksecker Post, G. A. R., were able to attend the meeting of the post, daughters of veterans were appointed to two offices. Miss Nell Muckley is quartermaster-sergeant and Miss Katherine Crites is sergeant-major.

John J. Roderick, Cleveland, former Dover postmaster and former member of Ricksecker post, now belongs to a cleveland post.

Boy Badly Hurt When Hit By Auto

GREENSBURG, Pa., April 8.—Paris Garlotta, 14, of Greensburg, sustained a probable concussion of the brain when struck by an auto driven by William Stevenson, of Dunbar, as the lad was crossing Main street. Stevenson was turned over for investigation to state police after it was reported he ran through a red signal light.

U. S. TRAVEL BUREAU URGED

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP.)—Creation of a division of travel in the Commerce Department was proposed by Representative Dyer (Rep.), of Missouri.

His bill was designed to promote tourist travel in the United States, particularly from Canada. In a statement, the Missourian said an assistant trade commissioner for travel should be placed in each of the American consular offices at Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver, and a travel trade commissioner at Ottawa.

The division also would assist in handling complaints of immigrants at Ellis Island.

Dyer cited the promotion by the French government and other European countries, of tourist trade and the spending by American tourists of millions of dollars in those countries annually. The European countries send few tourists to this country, he added, compared to those sent by America to them.

LEEDS TO HEAD AIR SALES FIRM

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., April 8.—(AP.)—William D. Leeds, Jr., son of the late "tin plate king" and former husband of the Princess Xenia of Russia, is to be president of an airplane sales company, an announcement here said.

The company, now being organized, will have headquarters here, and in connection with its sales rooms will operate a tearoom, a barber shop, valet service and other conveniences.

With Leeds in the venture, which is to start April 15, are two widely-known pilots, Edward Connerton and William Lawless. The company will replace the present Curtiss-Wright sales branch here, which will move to Curtiss-Wright Field at Valley Stream.

Leeds' company has not been given a name.

Specialties Developed By Allegheny Steel

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE Allegheny Steel Company has been steadily expanding its market for Alleghany Metal, its recently developed rustless alloy steel. The material is being used by the Ford Motor Company for radiator shells, lights, hub caps and other trim parts which formerly were made of chromium plated or nickel plated brass.

While Ford has developed into an important customer for this material, his plants by no means represent the only market. Allegheny metal is being made into a wide range of products. These include bars, sheets and tubes. It is being sold to makers of cooking utensils and special equipment for hotels, restaurants and hospitals. Another market has been found with the makers of parts for machines which are exposed to exceptionally corrosive influences.

At present the company is shipping nearly 2,000 tons of Allegheny Metal a month. While this does not bulk large in comparison with other steel products it is an important part of the business since the price is substantially higher.

Alloy of Chromium

ALLEGHENY METAL is an alloy of steel, chromium and nickel with minute proportions of other elements. The material will take a high polish, has an appearance equal to that of plated materials and will not corrode. In addition to other advantages it offers a selling point to the automobile industry since it will not show signs of wear as does chromium plate and requires no special care.

The production of Allegheny Metal represents a logical step in the company's development. Throughout its entire history it has been a pioneer in the production of special types of steels. The organization's policy has always been to expand in the quality end of the steel business rather than in the highly competitive general lines of steel production.

Supplies General Electric

THE Allegheny Steel Company makes all the electrical sheets used by the General Electric Company. The cores of motors, generators and transformers are made exclusively of high silicon sheets. The company was the first producer of sheets with a high content of silicon for this purpose.

Constant research has made it possible for the company during the 29 years of its operation to steadily increase the number of special steels and alloys and to improve its production methods. During 1929 investments in new equipment amounted to $1,333,987.

The business was also expanded last year by a consolidation with the West Penn Steel Company which had a plant adjoining that of Allegheny Steel at Brackenridge, Pa.

Profit Shows Gain

WHILE the Allegheny Steel Company has felt some slackening tendency in business activity this year, its profit for the early part of 1930 made a fairly satisfactory comparison with the corresponding period of 1929.

Net profit in 1929 was $3,311,492. After deducting dividends on the preferred stock this was equivalent to $5.05 a share on 610,026 shares of common stock. In 1928 net profit was $2,193,235 or $7.32 a share on 268,485 common shares.

In addition to paying regular monthly dividends of 15 cents on the common stock, the company will pay an extra of 25 cents on April 18. Extras of 25 cents were also paid in April, July, October, November and December, 1929.

NEISNER PLANS EXPANSION

NEW YORK, April 8.—Plans of Neisner Bros., Inc., for the current year call for handling of a business in excess of $20,000,000. Under present operating conditions it would be reasonable to expect net profit of about $1,500,000.

Expansion is progressing steadily, 17 new stores being scheduled for opening this year. In addition, negotiations are being conducted for a number of leases for future occupancy.

Steel Spring Net $10.93 Per Share

The Standard Steel Spring Company reports net profit for the year ended December 31, of $970,303, after all charges, depreciation and taxes, equal to $10.39 a share on 93,303 shares of stock outstanding. This compares with $993,449 net reported for the year ended December 31, 1928, and $510,142 for the year ended December 31, 1927.

Surplus at the end of 1929 totaled $1,652,387, against $1,055,002 at the end of 1928.

Add Night Shift To Clothespin Factory

RICHWOOD, W. Va., April 8.—A night shift of workmen has been added to the big plant of the Steele-Wallace Corporation, world's largest clothespin factory.

The output has been almost doubled. An accumulation of orders is the reason.

Republic Steel Head Predicts Good Year

NEW YORK, April 8.—Tom M. Girdler, chairman of the board of Republic Steel Corporation in a statement regarding the 1930 outlook states that while the current year as a whole will probably not be quite as good a steel year as 1929, officials are optimistic and believe that it will be one of the company's best years.

Republic's electric weld plant is a particularly active branch of the business. A new electric weld plant costing over $6,000,000 will be completed and begin operations in about 30 days. The existing small unit proved successful and turned out pipe of such a high quality that it has been in constant demand. On completion of the new plant total capacity will be about tenfold what it is at present, monthly output increasing from about 3,500 to 30,000 tons, or an annual capacity of about 300,000 to 400,000 tons a year.

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENTS ERRATIC

Trading Shows Decrease In Volume With Fewer Large Blocks Offered

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP.)—Extreme nervousness of professional traders was reflected in highly erratic price movements in today's stock market, although speculators for the advance appeared to retain the advantage. Trading showed a moderate falling off in volume, with fewer large blocks appearing on the tape. The ticker kept fairly well abreast of the market in the early trading.

Business news was not very encouraging. Steel ingot output in March was the lowest of any similar month since 1925, prices are at new low levels and a decrease in the unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation is expected Thursday. President Denney of the Erie Railroad told stockholders that business conditions were such that he could not forecast when dividends on the common stock would be inaugurated

COPPER MAY DIP

Increasing doubt over the ability of copper producers to maintain the 18 cents a pound price for the red metal is apparent. The Standard Oil of New York announced an increase in gasoline prices in its territory.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent, but dropped to 3½ again in the early afternoon when a large supply of funds appeared.

Much of today's selling was inspired by the growing belief that the market was entitled to at least a technical reaction after its recent advance. However, the repeated efforts of bear traders to "catch the top" have proved expensive.

U. S. Steel Common appeared to be under rather steady selling pressure, yielding about 2 points. General Motors crossed 52 to a new high for the year.

REACH NEW HIGHS

Among issues to reach new 1930 highs were Radio-Keith-Orpheum which crossed 44 on a heavy turnover. American Can, Timken Roller Bearing, Corn Products, Stone and Webster, Raybestos, Shubert Theaters, Best & Co., and National Air Transport.

Some of the early soft spots were Allied Chemical, U. S. Freight, American Machine and Foundry, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, American Tobacco "B," Simmons Co., and International Cement, all of which sold down 3 to 5½ points.

GRAIN EXPORTS INCREASE

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Exports of grain from the United States in the week ended April 5 totaled 1,201,000 bushels as compared with 509,000 bushels in the preceding week and 1,443,000 in the corresponding week of last year.

Reports to the Department of Commerce for the week ended April 5 showed exports of wheat amounted to 842,000 bushels against 357,000 bushels in the preceding week; barley 225,000 against 33,000; corn 117,000 against 103,000, oats 5,000 against 8,000; rye 12,000 against 8,000.

Canadian grains in transit cleared from United States Atlantic ports amounted to 1,205,000 as compared with 614,000 bushels.

Exports of United States wheat flour totaled 148,000 barrels as contrasted with 214,000 barrels. Canadian wheat flour shipped through the United States totaled 99,000 barrels against 61,000.

Patino Mines Omits Last 1929 Dividend

This Shows How Business Wind Is Now Blowing

—By B. C. FORBES—

THIS will astonish you: One New York savings bank has had more than 10,000 new accounts opened since January 1. Its assets in the same brief period have increased upwards of $14,000,000.

ESTIMATES of construction to be done this year have been raised within recent weeks a full billion dollars, bringing the 1930 figure to $11,000,000,000. Assistant Secretary of Commerce Klein also announces that building contracts awarded last month increased 45 per cent above February's total.

PRESIDENT A. E. DICKINSON, of the Indiana Limestone Company, after conducting a national building survey, observes:

"By far the worst has been seen, and it is still probable that 1930 will equal or surpass last year's total building volume. For the first quarter America spent approximately $1,190,000,000 on new construction. This is below a year ago, but contemplated projects make a favorable showing. The building industry should be a real sustaining force to general business by mid-summer."

E. G. BEICHLER, president of the largest domestic refrigeration company in the country, states:

"All first-quarter production records were broken this year. More men are being employed than ever before at this season. This increase in employment took place after the installation of a large amount of labor-saving machinery, which in itself was counted upon to take care of a normal increase in business without addition to the personnel during the first quarter. We expect to break all records in 1930."

NEW securities issued in the first three months of this year reached $2,240,000,000, while there was a very sharp decrease, ($1,445,000,000) in stock offerings, new issues of bonds, at over $1,860,000,000, represent a gain or more than $420,000,000 over last year.

WALTER C. TEAGLE, head of Standard Oil of New Jersey, the largest of all our oil companies, tells me that the industry is in distinctly sounder condition than it was a year ago and that prospects for continued improvement are encouraging. Throughout the industry it is becoming more widely recognized that it is better business to sell a normal amount of production at a normal profit than to go in for abnormal production which has to be sold at an abnormally low price. Therefore, 1930 promises to prove a more satisfactory year than 1929.

AMERICAN shipowners, as well as American shipbuilders feel more hopeful today than at any time since the industry's post-war collapse. Thanks to intelligent governmental co-operation, more new tonnage is being built, and operators are sanguine that better financial returns will be realized.

PROSPERITY, everyone knows, is not breaking the speed limit. But the foregoing straws show at least how the wind is blowing in certain directions.

WHILE cynical and other critical comments have not been uncommon concerning what some have called the "Hoover Ballyhoo Conferences," it is refreshing to receive a piece of definite news like this, contained in a letter to the writer from W. V. Baker, of the Detroit Sheet Metal Works:

"In our little business, and we are typical of quite a large volume the country over, we depend on plant extensions in connection with additional or improved plant equipment. So, when plant extensions were curtailed, we all quickly felt it.

"Shortly after the Washington conference the writer was called to the offices of the American Radiator Corporation. Mr. Woolley, the president, had decided to make all the additions or improvements to their plants that could possibly be justified as of future economic value—this in spite of their greatly reduced sales.

"We have since been favored with orders from them for equipment running into thousands of dollars, and are still working on more projects which they will undoubtedly carry out for still further extension works. With their permission, we are spreading this work out to employ as great a number of men as possible, at reduced working hours.

"I merely desired to have you know of this instance of one man's patriotic reaction to the situation."

That's the kind of action needed to fill pay envelopes and stomachs.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Trading was of a nervous and uncertain character in today's curb market. Profit taking was heavy, but was fairly well absorbed. Price trends were largely narrow and irregular.

SELF DEFENSE IN SHOOTING CLAIMED

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

WE FAILED our readers on the arrival of the first robin. While we were enjoying the lethargy induced by hints of warm weather, others were scurrying about the town for a sight of the first robin. We admit miserable defeat. But, like Senator Grundy, we refuse to retire from the field. If we were beaten in the robin chase, we have scored in the blue-jay contest, for yesterday we saw a blue-jay. With pardonable pride we point out that blue-jays are more difficult to sight than robins. We add that the first robin only indicates spring, but that the first blue-jay doesn't fool—when you see a blue-jay you know it's spring. Also on our side is the revelation that the blue-jay is a member of the Cyanocitta Cristata group, whereas the robin merely belongs to the Erithacus Rubecula family.

He was born on the South Side and 12 years later he was working in a glass factory. Then he graduated to the newspapers and became a reporter. When the United States joined the war he, too, joined, and eventually reached the status of a sergeant major. After the war he combined aviation and newspaper work and in 1926 the New York World sent him around the world on plane, ship and train to beat Moars' record of 21 days. He made excellent progress until he struck the interior of Russia. There he was lost for a day or two simply because the Soviet government had changed a railroad schedule. He returned to this country and his typewriter, and now he has just published "A Narrative History of Aviation." It is an interesting, valuable book, well-written.

He is John ("Swede") Goldstrom, and his parents and six brothers and sisters still live in Sheraden. The other day John E. Wright, one of Pittsburgh's advertising experts, met up with "Swede" in New York and they dropped over to Hoboken and talked about the days when horse cars were considered speedy and Carson street was regarded as too wide.

WE FEEL a sweeping statement coming on. In cases like this it is best to utter the sweeping statement and get it out of the way. Ours: There are more barbecue stands along the William Penn Highway immediately east of Pittsburgh than along any other highway immediately east of any other city in the country. As we passed one after another a few days ago we couldn't help but reflect that there are so many of them the proprietors must be starving to death.

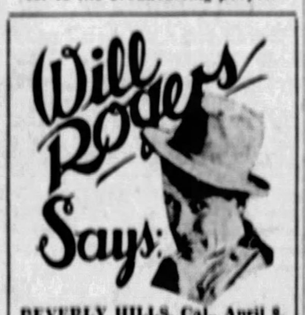
It is a pleasure to report a criticism of Amos 'n' Andy, those two gentlemen having received more praise than any other two gentlemen immediately east of any highway in the country. A doting mother who heard with shocked ears her 5-year-old son using

"ain't" insisted on being told where he had come across it. The child said Amos used the word, and what was good enough for Amos was good enough for him. The mother's attempts to correct him have failed and at last reports she was considering writing a letter to the broadcasting people.



BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., April 8. FIRST London dispatch said we were to sink three ships and England five. Hugh Gibson, over the radio, said its three apiece now. I thought that first was a typographical and not an English diplomatic error. He didn't mention "parity," the thing we went over to get. That's one characteristic of our country, we can get all lathering at the time over some political campaign promise or some conference pledge, but if the thing just drags along long enough we forget what it was that was originally promised. The short memories of the American voter is what keep our politicians in office.

WILL.

WJAS SCORES IN FIGHT FOR WAVE SHIFT

Allocation of Band Just Returned to Second Zone Will Meet Local Needs

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

Pittsburgh listeners who petitioned the Federal Radio Commission some months ago to give WJAS a better wavelength had their first wishes gratified yesterday when the commission announced that it would return to the second zone the 1020 kilocycle channel temporarily loaned to KYW, Chicago, in the fourth zone. The 1020 channel (294.1 meters) originally was assigned to the second zone, which includes Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Detroit and Louisville. It is the channel requested by WJAS and its listeners in their fight to better reception conditions in the city.

The vision of radio devotees here that they might some day have a wavelength assignment for "locals" that would permit clear reception without interference, may materialize from the commission's action yesterday.

IDEAL ALLOCATION

If WJAS is assigned 294 meters, Pittsburghers will have an ideal arrangement with KDKA on 305.9 meters, WJAS on 294 meters, WCAE on 245.8 meters and KQV on 217.3 meters. This would give local stations an even distribution on the dials and would eliminate interference now encountered in certain sections of the city.

A hearing on the WJAS application for the 1020 channel will be held in Washington on April 16. It is believed the local station has a priority application over other stations seeking this channel. Other stations wanting "1020" include WLAP at Louisville, WWJ at Detroit, WLBW at Oil City and WCAU at Philadelphia.

The decision of the commission will be put into effect May 1.

WAVELENGTH CHANGES

After May 1, KYW will operate on 263.2 meters. New wavelengths announced for other clear channel stations beginning May 1 include WTAM on 277.8 from 280.4; WWVA on 254.2 from 258.6; WRVA on 260.9 from 270.3; KSL on 275.2 from 265.5; WCAU on 366 from 256.4; KMOX on 270.3 from 275.2; KTHS on 280.4 from 288.5.

Until a decision is made in the WJAS application, the "1020 channel" is tentatively assigned for use by WHAS in Louisville, it was announced. This action of the commission is merely indicative of its intention to return the "1020 channel" to the second zone and has no bearing on its permanent assignment, it was said.

SEEK BANDITS IN 2 HOLDUPS

Bandits who obtained $36 in holdups of a South Side confectionery and a pedestrian in Squirrel Hill last night were being hunted by police today.

Two armed Negroes walked into the confectionery of Joseph Baron, at 1801 Sidney street, ordered Baron, and John Kunkel, of 1818 Sidney street, a patron, to throw up their hands. While one held them at bay, his accomplice looted the cash register of $10 and took $5 from Kunkel. They escaped in an automobile.

Dominick Lanana, of 2211 Imperial street, was robbed of $21 by two bandits who leaped from an automobile at Shady avenue and Douglas street. The pair sped away in the car after warning their victim against making an outcry.

COUNCIL VOTES FIRE BUREAU

Council has voted to establish a Bureau of Fire Prevention over the protest of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board and the Building Owners and Managers Association. The board will cost approximately $36,000 a year and will employ 10 inspectors, a chief inspector and two clerks.

J. W. Cree, Jr., and J. W. Bamford appeared before Council at the hearing yesterday. Their protest was based on the conclusion that the ordinance creating the bureau gave arbitrary power to the inspectors to enforce its regulations. City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt explained that the bureau will be under the Director of Public Safety, and its decisions subject to his approval. The ordinance passed without a dissenting vote.

Homewood Man Hurt By Auto

Edward Woods, 74, of 7414 Finance street, was in a serious condition today in the Pittsburgh Hospital from injuries suffered yesterday when he was said to have walked against the side of an automobile at Hamilton and Lang avenues. Woods was attempting to cross the street when the accident occurred, police said.

The conferences began a week ago. From unofficial sources it was learned that the employes are demanding a five-cent increase in the hourly wage of motormen and conductors, making their maximum 75 cents an hour and a 15-cent raise, bringing the maximum hourly pay to 90 cents, for operators of one-man cars.

LIFE PERILED DEFENDANT DECLARES

Witness for State Tells Of Threats He Received; Shooting Followed Fight

Self-defense was the plea offered today in behalf of James M. Kelly, 28, on trial charged with the slaying of Peter McGann, 33, of 2330 Reed street.

Attorney Louis Little, in his opening address to the jury, after the Commonwealth closed its case, declared testimony would be offered to show that Kelly was set upon by McGann and a crowd of his friends and that Kelly fired only after he heard someone shout "shoot him," and believed he was to be fired upon.

ACCUSED OF THEFT

McGann accused Kelly of stealing 200 cases of whisky which McGann had brought in a truck from Florida and placed in a Soho garage, Little said. McGann also had warned Kelly to stay away from the former's girl.

McGann was shot by Kelly in a Fifth avenue confectionery November 23 and died four days later.

Nathan Barnett, 410 McKee place, for the defense testified that McGann told him he was going to kill Kelly that night. When Barnett tried to pacify him McGann told him, he had better keep out of it or he would be filled full of lead. McGann and his gang grabbed Kelly and pushed him into a telephone booth, before the shooting occurred, Barnett said.

Mrs. Terese Bowman, 3220 Fifth avenue, testified that on the day of the shooting McGann had kicked in her door and had been arrested on complaint of neighbors. Her husband had deserted her six years ago and she had been going with McGann for six years. He had threatened to kill her if she went out with another man and kill the man as well, the witness said. She had gone out with Kelly occasionally, she said.

Additional Commonwealth witnesses today corroborated previous testimony for the prosecution.

David Brown, of 361 Soho street, chief state witness testified he had received four threats against his life, the last one Sunday, over the telephone, if he took the stand.

TELLS OF SHOOTING

Brown testified that McGann had urged him to strike Kelly but that he did not, and that instead McGann struck Brown on the jaw. Kelly took off his coat and entered the poolroom, the other two following. Then, Brown testified, Kelly fired, the bullet striking McGann.

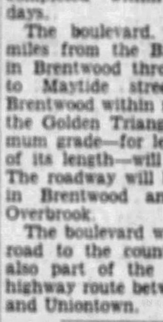
Assistant District Attorney Earl R. Jackson declared that a copy of the testimony at the coroner's inquest and Jackson's notes taken at a quiz of witnesses had disappeared from his desk. He had been able to replace them, he said.

Architects Here Forge To Front Ranks

By PENELOPE REDD.

A parade of Pittsburgh architecture may be reviewed in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium any day this week.

It is the first exhibition given by local architects in six or seven years. Those who make the rounds and look at the hundreds of photographs depicting structures designed by home talent will come away realizing that not all of our fine buildings have been the brain babies of imported experts.



Penelope Redd

Architectural anonymity has been the controlling policy of the exhibition committee in the method of displaying the entries.

So far as the layman is concerned, unless the structure happens to be familiar, there is no clue to determine what the building or its purpose may be. The exhibition is almost entirely unlabeled and without benefit of catalogue, rebus, or hidden meaning to assist the bemused observer.

COMMERCIAL BUILDINGS

There are about 400 photographs of 123 completed buildings representing 40 firms. The exhibition embraces three divisions, commercial buildings, institutions and residences.

The commercial buildings do not include any industrial developments since these are usually designed by engineers. Thus we lose the buildings which are highly representative of Pittsburgh, and also at times, magnificent.

The commercial buildings included are largely banks, hotels, apartments and stores. Without benefit of any information smuggled or given under seal, we noted among banks the classic Citizens' Trust Company of Bellevue designed by Vernon Wilson and Frederick Giffen; the impressive annex to the People's Savings Bank and the Iron and Glass Dollar Savings Bank on the South Side, both by Press Dowler.

The Monongahela National Bank by Edward Stotz represents this man at his best in adapting his design to a peculiarly shaped plot. Thoroughly dignified, its austerity is relieved by well-placed pilasters acting as frames for the windows and giving the facades a sense of unity in variety.

The most suave interior to the lay eye is that of Reymer's tea room in the Clark Building, designed by Lamont H. Button.

NEW SCHOOLS

An important division of the institutional group is that of schools, beginning with the Board of Public Education on Bellefield avenue by Ingham and Boyd, a building which supplements harmoniously the Renaissance-reminiscence in the nearby Carnegie Institute.

Two designs by James Stewart and Sons, the Oliver and the Herron Hill High schools, represent a type of architecture that has been developed in America to house the increasingly important educational activities.

The Cathedral High School for Boys designed by Link, Weber and Bowers in its fortress-like style, relieved by whimsical turrets, marks the introduction of a kind

TWO MEMBERS WALK OUT IN SYMPATHY

Police Chief Ordered to Oust Man While Body Clashes Over $496 Bill

Councilman Thomas John was ordered ejected and two others walked out in sympathy with him as a climax to a heated argument of West Homestead Borough Council last night. John is a former president of the body.

The war of words started when objection was raised to payment of $496 to the Mesta Machine Company for erection of steps in Mesta street several months ago. Charge was made that the steps were not authorized legally, and a motion was made, but not passed, that the finance committee turn the matter over to the auditing committee with a view to a surcharge.

During the dispute, President C. J. Beatty ordered Chief of Police David Lindberg to eject John. With John went Councilmen P. J. Kavanagh and C. T. Robinson, members of the minority faction.

After the trio had quit the chamber, Councilman R. H. Lowry presented a motion that John be suspended. The motion was carried. Council voted also to borrow $50,000 to pay existing indebtedness.

Business men of the Pittsburgh district are uged in letters sent out by Albert J. Stowe, manager of the commerce department of the Chamber of Commerce, to aid government enumerators in gathing statistics of the wholesale and retail trade. Many business men, it is said, are reluctant to give facts concerning their business.

Mr. Stowe reminded business men that all information given enumerators is secret, to be used only in compiling general statistics. This is the first time that such a census has been taken.

HOW MONUMENT HILL, WHICH STEAM SHOVELS ARE CUTTING AWAY, APPEARS FROM AN AIRPLANE HIGH ABOVE

A giant knife, it seems, cut down through Monument Hill, being removed from the North Side. But mere men and steam shovels are doing it and the earth is being used to fill much of the low-lying, often-flooded area near the Allegheny river.

of architecture suggestive of the transition from the Romanesque into the Gothic as found in Flanders.

The same firm has another mediaeval adaptation in St. Mark's convent and school in McKees Rocks in which the forms resemble those buildings depicted in the miniature painting in old manuscripts.

Of the many churches included, the First Presbyterian at Dawson, designed by Thomas Pringle, and the Sacred Heart Church by Carlton Strong, are pre-eminent. The Sacred Heart Church will inevitably be an object of architectural pilgrimage.

Another exceptional architectural design is the tomb of Mary O'Connor, jr. which Frederick Bigger has combined the symbolism of early Christianity with a form absolutely modern.

COUNTRY LIFE

The Chartiers Heights, the Long Vue Club and details from the Rolling Rock Club illustrate community centers that are changing our countryside into informal garden cities.

Of the residences, the outstanding group is designed by Janssen and Cocken with the Edgar Kaufmann house on Pasadena drive as an imaginative high. One of the first houses in this district to be built in the Normandy manner, it has a picturesque flair that almost no other house hereabouts has rivaled.

The Robinson house in Indiana Township, designed by Frederick Bigger and Harry Viehman, shows the growing popularity of the log cabin as a nucleus for the country house, a type popular throughout the Fox Chapel district.

The decision for the medals in the three classes will be arrived at by considering the public vote, the vote of 10 honorary judges, and the five active jurors which includes the president of the American Institute of Architects.

ROADS OPPOSE OPENING LAKE RATE FIGHT

Southern Lines Ask Plea Of Pittsburgh District Operators Be Dismissed

A counter move has been taken by four southern railroads in opposition to the attempt of the Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio coal field operators to obtain what they believe is an equitable rail freight rate on lake cargo coal. The four roads yesterday asked dismissal of the motion made by the coal interests for reopening the lake cargo rate cases.

The roads which asked the dismissal are the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Louisville and Nashville, the Norfolk and Western and the Virginian railroads. They presented a motion to the Interstate Commerce Commission asking for the dismissal of the appeal of the operators.

The railroads stated that northern operators have failed to show any injury due to the defendant railroads' charging allegedly unfair freight rates from Southern West Virginia, Eastern Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia than the rates of the Northern roads from districts from which the complainants ship lake cargo coal.

The Southern roads asked that they not be required to answer the complaints until their motion for dismissal had been heard in oral argument before the entire commission.

The Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

An Illinois railroad has employed a specialist who will be on the alert for physical afflictions among its employes, especially those ailments which are attributed to ductless gland disorders. Does the individual appreciate such concern on the part of his employer?

CORYL ESTHER, Baltimore, actress: I should think they would. They should appreciate any attention like that which is given gratis. Specialists come high, these days.

Miss Esther

BILLY B. WARNER, New York, comedian: No. Let nature take care of those things. Sounds to me like doping a racehorse. Why not distribute among the employes the tens of thousands they probably give this man yearly. They'd appreciate that.

B. B. Warner

MAE HANSEN, Millvale, dancer: Oh, I don't know. So far as I know, ductless gland trouble is one of those fads we have. This man may know his business, but he may be a quack. If he's a fake, he won't be appreciated, you bet.

Miss Hansen

MARGIE MESSIER, Harris theater, specialty dancer: Marvelous. Isn't it? Just fine of corporations to take such good care of their employes? Why, of course they'll appreciate it.

Miss Messier

EDYTH NOON, East Liberty: Yes. I believe so. Employes have a habit of appreciating things their employers do for them. I know if I had a doctor to care for me free, I'd like it.

Miss Noon

DICK WARE, downtown, master of ceremonies: No, of course not. What good does it do? Now if the company hired a doctor to care for the more ordinary ills, or give free dentists' attention, it might be different. But I've never had to stay home with ductless gland trouble. Have you?

TWO BIG STILLS DISCOVERED BY RAIDERS

Four Places Visited by Dry Officers Net One Arrest; Missing Roomer Sought

Two large stills and 600 bottles of ale were confiscated by prohibition agents who arrested one man in four raids yesterday.

Twenty-five sacks, each containing 24 bottles of ale, were found in the basement of a dwelling at 900 Sherman avenue, North Side, agents said. The ale was said to have belonged to a former roomer.

On the second floor of a dwelling at 3144 Griffith street, the raiders reported uncovering a 150-gallon still, 18 barrels of mash and five gallons of moonshine. Nobody was found in the house at the time.

While a raid was being staged on a house at 1222 Popular way, where a 50-gallon still was discovered, Carmin Yimin, 21, walked in and told the raiders the still belonged to him, according to the agents' report. He was arrested.

Raiding a dwelling at Metcalf street and Melrose avenue, the dry officers seized 59 half-pints of whisky and 46 half-pints of gin. The owner of the contraband was being sought.

DUQUESNE CLUB GETS PERMIT

The Duquesne Club was granted a permit today to erect a 12-story addition in the rear of its clubhouse on Sixth avenue. Janssen & Cocken, the architects, announced that razing of the old Arbuckle warehouse, now standing on the site the new building is to occupy, would start at once, and the erection of the edifice would immediately follow.

The Bureau of Building Inspection had refused the application for a permit on the ground the plans did not conform to the requirements of the zoning ordinance. An appeal was then taken to the Zoning Board of Adjustment and a hearing held yesterday.

The new building will be 81x116 feet with an inner court. It will be of brick and stone. The court will be entirely of stone and will have a fountain.

There will be a laundry in the basement. The first floor will have a sitting room and oyster bar and will open on the court. The second floor will have a large dining room. Kitchens will occupy the third floor. There will be a banquet hall and private dining rooms on the fourth floor. The fifth floor will be devoted to Turkish baths. Employes will be quartered on the sixth floor; there will also be lockers there. The seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh floors will have bedrooms and bathrooms. There will be a penthouse on the twelfth floor.

It is estimated the building will cost, furnished, $1,500,000.

RECORD BROKEN BY FRIGIDAIRE

DAYTON, Ohio, April 8.—All first quarter production records were broken by Frigidaire Corporation during the first three months of 1930, according to E. G. Biechler, president and general manager. More men are being employed than ever before at this time of the year, he stated.

This increase in employment took place after the installation of a large amount of labor-saving machinery, counted upon to take care of a normal increase in business without additions to the personnel.

Present manufacturing activity, according to Biechler, is centered upon the household electric refrigerator. The moist air compartment, or hydrator, recently added to the line, has proved to be a very popular improvement and indications point to a still greater demand when the public becomes acquainted with the advantages it affords.

Steeds of Police May Be More Colorful

With a number of the black chargers of the mounted police officers ready for their pensions, the city is faced with the problem of obtaining new mounts when a scarcity of black horses exists throughout the country. Police officials have been informed that most farmers have abandoned breeding the black horses of the kind used by the city mounties.

As a result some of the proud members of the city's "finest" may have to content themselves with riding assorted bays, browns and chestnuts.

But that's a horse of another color.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Theatergoers Undaunted By Snow

BRAVING temperamental April's sudden December mood last evening, Pittsburgh folk, gowned in their smartest, sallied forth to the Alvin to see "New Moon," to the Nixon to see "Strange Interlude," to Syria Mosque to hear Rosa Ponselle.

The William Christopher Robinsons, back from their travels, I noted at the Alvin with their daughter, Mary Franklin Robinson, who made her debut this season, and their younger daughter, Althea. Mrs. Robinson looked distinguished in a smart gown of French blue chiffon, and Mary wore a black and red velvet dress, and her sister a frock of jade green crepe. I also caught a glimpse of Margaret Holdship with a group of young friends.

LAST evening the Nixon had as large, as smart and as enthusiastic an audience for the second week of "Strange Interlude" as on the very first evening. Few appeared in formal attire, most of them preferring the simple afternoon frock and hat.

Many Attend

I saw Mrs. Zach Collier and she was wearing purple blue crepe and a coat of black seal.

Priscilla Hall, who is the president of the Junior League, was there too, and was wearing a smart sports ensemble of deep cream tweed and a brown cloth coat with collar and cuffs of mink.

And I caught a glimpse of charming Mrs. George Kelly III, with her husband, and she was wearing an afternoon gown of beige crepe with a flounce of lace in the same shade, and lace bordered the flaring sleeves. I noticed she wore a beige hat of the new lacy straw.

THE Mosque was filled from first row orchestra seats to the topmost row in the second balcony with an enthusiastic audience, brilliantly gowned. And the artist of the evening, Rosa Ponselle, was distinctively gowned to begin with. She wore black taffeta fashioned with a tight-fitting bodice, a sweeping full skirt. And the only ornament was a yoke of rhinestones and crystals ending in a huge, scintillating butterfly in back.

Vivid Gowns

All the music lovers in town were there. In the crowded corridor, during the one intermission, I caught a glimpse of Mrs. George Pomeroy Bassett wearing fleet blue panne velvet and a wrap of blue velvet, collared with chinchilla.

As she was leaving the Mosque I had a glimpse of Mrs. W. Edgar Reed in black velvet. And I caught sight of Mary Carroll, too.

And Mrs. Thomas K. Cree, who's the director of the Twentieth Century Club Choral, was there, wearing French blue lace and a mink coat, and Mrs. A. W. Sherrill, who was with her, chose a printed chiffon gown with a black background.

Satin Smart

Others I noticed during the intermission were Elinor Munroe, who wore apricot chiffon, with rows of ruffles at the hem-line, and Mrs. John W. Lawrence, in black velvet.

Is Box Holder

Mrs. William F. Hill chose a gown of hydrangea blue panne velvet with a wrap of the same material, and her daughter Eleanor was in black crepe.

Vivid Louise Evans in a gown of deep rose panne satin and a wrap of rose and gold, looked striking as usual, and Margaret Rose Close, shell-pink satin, and Mary Black, pink georgette. Jane Edson was in black lace, and Mrs. Arthur P. Woolfolk in black crepe. And Mrs. Simon T. Patterson chose black lace for her gown.

Others I noted included the Edwin Ruuds.

Princess Der Ling Tells Sewickley Club Women Court Experiences

PRINCESS DER LING, of the Manchu Court of the Empress-Dowager Tzu Hsi of China (now Mrs. T. C. White, of New York), self-reliant, self-possessed, business-like in the extreme, and most democratic, addressed the Sewickley Valley Woman's Club yesterday afternoon. She gave many details concerning the pomp and panoply of the old colorful Manchu regime when she was first lady-in-waiting to the remarkable Empress-Dowager.

After attending a rigidly-ruled French convent, where the pupils wore uniforms, the princess was ready to enter Vassar and was looking forward to having some good times and pretty clothes when her presence, as well as that of her sister, was demanded by the empress-dowager.

Her young girl's curiosity and her refreshing frankness, strange and even astonishing in the old-world court, accustomed as it was to strict proprieties, were amusingly detailed by the speaker, whose name translated, by the way, means "Eternal Grace."

She described Tzu Hsi as "a woman whose word was law and no comeback and no maybe," but a woman who was truly feminine and whose heart was won by the young girl when she dyed the older woman's hair (to make the crown more becoming than it was on the graying locks) and blended her face powders after secrets learned in Paris.

Mrs. M. W. Stoner, president of the club, entertained at luncheon in the Community Kitchen for the princess and here she chatted freely and fluently in a tongue that never hesitates for an English word, that makes frequent use of American slang and whose accent might easily be mistaken for French. Princess Der Ling wore an embroidered gown that had belonged to the empress-dowager and an elaborate headdress of jewels and kingfisher feathers, a replica of a very precious one given her as a wedding present by Tzu Hsi.

AMUSING tales concerning the famous people whom his lecture bureau has booked were told to the Twentieth Century Club yesterday by James B. Pond, of New York. Stories of their idiosyncrasies that led to missed connections and unkept contracts entertained the interested audience. One of the bits of reminiscence had to do with Lord Dunsany, who Mr. Pond said, came to this country prepared as if for an Arctic sojourn—woolens, tweeds, fur coat, fur hat and even fur mittens, none of which he could be persuaded to discard, although the thermometer's mercury was running high.

Mr. Pond spoke in great praise of Bernard Shaw, who has consistently refused to lecture in America for money, declaring he wants to make soap-box speeches in the parks, as they do in England. Hugh Walpole, Sir Arthur W. Brown, Blasco Ibanez, Maurice Maeterlinck, Yeats, Moore, Lady Gregory and others were also mentioned in the talk.

Freeman Hammond, of the Pittsburgh School of Speech, spoke on "Dickens' Relation to the Theater," commenting on his ability as an actor and the charming amateur theatricals that were so much a part of his family life. Mr. Hays spoke of the visits of the author to America, giving details of his Pittsburgh visit and reading his impressions of the progress made between visits. Miss Betty Beatty and Miss Ruth Crawford contributed piano and vocal music.

CAUTION MUST BE EXERCISED IN CHOOSING NEW WARDROBE

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, April 8.—Latitude, restricted only by good taste—the most severe restriction of all—is the keynote of the present mode. There is nothing startlingly new, but there is plenty of choice for every type. Suits of rough tweed lunch at the Ritz, frocks of rough woolen fabric are worn during the day for all kinds of activities, and suits of silk or fine woolens go walking at all hours of the day. It will therefore be readily apparent, that because of the very variety care and caution must be exercised in the choice of one's wardrobe, and accessories must be in perfect taste and harmony. Otherwise the results will be ludicrous rather than lovely, and experiments with costume jewelry should be gingerly undertaken, and then abandoned.

WE are sending you a sketch of a frock that is ideal wear for pleasant spring days, for all but formal daytime doings. It is from Augustabernard, who uses a black rough surfaced woolen to fashion it. A trimming of the material laid in diagonal fold edges the necklines and the top of the two skirt flounces. It is also found on the sleeves. A yoke of white pique with a perky bow on one shoulder is a very becoming note, and in addition, one sleeve woos smartness with a similar piece of white pique set in above the diagonal folds and ending in a crisp bow.

THE other sketch is introduced with a puzzling question—When does a Princess gown become a crinoline? The answer is offered by Captain Molyneux in the form of an original black lace gown. It molds the figure almost down to the knees, and suddenly finishes up with a succession of lacy frills placed over a stiff crinoline foundation. Another frill of the lace successfully stimulates a bolero and forms a cape at the back of the bodice. Although this is a very attractive dress, it is not easy to wear, and such a style should be eschewed by the majority of us.

NAVY SETS ZEP LANDING FEE

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP.)—If the Graf Zeppelin crosses the Atlantic next summer and lands at Lakehurst on schedule, remaining only 24 hours, the Navy will be paid more than $5,000 to cover the cost of work necessary to land and take care of the huge airship.

The Navy announced that it had reached an agreement with the German Luftschiffbau Zeppelin Company on charges to be assessed for the landing at Lakehurst.

To prepare the Lakehurst station for the Graf, the Navy will get $3,000; for every 24 hours the ship is at the port there will be a charge of $2,000 for use of the mooring mast, the ground crew and station facilities; if the ship should arrive late there will be an additional charge of $1,000 for each 24 hours of tardiness.

The company also must pay transportation charges for additional marines; agree to reimburse the Navy for damages; post $15,000 as a guarantee that the charges will be paid and waive all claims of damages for injuries any member of the crew might suffer at Lakehurst.

When the Graf made its last flight there was no charge for the use of Lakehurst, since the trip was experimental. The projected summer flight to South America, the United States and back to Friedrichshafen will be made to determine the feasibility of a commercial route.

TWO MEN HELD IN STOCK FAKE

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP.)—Two men arrested Saturday in connection with an alleged stock swindle scheme which was to make a million dollars in less than a month were held in $7,500 bail each for hearing April 22 by United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter. They are charged with using the mails to defraud.

Attorney General Hamilton Ward said the two men, Albert Contento and Joseph M. Kurtz, alias J. Weller, received $42,000 in the first week of a projected three-week drive in response to circulars in which they offered Ford Motor of England stock for sale without having any to deliver.

Ward said that Kurtz was arrested in Chicago, but acquitted of a charge of forgery in 1922 and that Contento was discharged in Magistrate's Court here in 1928 on a charge of assault and robbery.

Baby Fretful Day and Night From Diaper Rashes

Mrs. D. thought her baby was "naughty" because he cried so much. She wondered why he slept so fitfully and cried so when he was bathed and cleansed after a diaper change.

His tender skin was dry and chafed, and although he suffered from "ammonia diaper" Mrs. D. thought "all babies have it!"

A friend of hers told her that such skin irritations were not natural in the healthy, well-cared for child, and told how she was avoiding trouble in her baby's case by using Mennen Baby Oil and Mennen Borated Talcum.

The soothing oil, gently massaged into all the creases and folds of the skin every morning prevented all chafing and rawness. And after every diaper change, the oil can be applied liberally to the buttocks and thighs, acting as a waterproof coating and preventing the acid of the urine and the fecal matter from clinging to and attacking the child's skin.

Mennen Baby Oil will keep baby's skin soft and smooth and free from pain. After oiling her baby the wise mother wipes off the excess oil and then gently dusts Mennen Borated Baby Talcum over the child's body, and liberally into the diaper region.

Both oil and powder being scientifically medicated they will prevent and cure diaper rashes.

Special Offer! This week your druggist is offering a can of Mennen Borated Baby Talcum FREE with a purchase of a bottle of Mennen Baby Oil for 50c. Mennen Baby Oil is a sterilized blend of oils, properly medicated, pleasantly scented, and will not become rancid. The Mennen Company, Newark, N. J.

Only Medicine That Does What It Claims
says Nicholas J. Jansen

You folks who have tried medicine after medicine without benefit, take heart. Read this letter of Mr. N. J. Jansen and then let your conscience be your guide.

"Before starting Tanlac," said Mr. Jansen, "I was very rundown and suffered terrible agony from pains in every bone in my body. My back hurt until I felt it was pulling in two. My appetite was very poor and gas would form on my stomach and I would bloat until I thought I would burst. I couldn't sleep and didn't care whether I worked or not. I tried medicine after medicine and none gave me relief until I started taking Tanlac and this is the only medicine that does what it claims. Now I feel fine in every way. Pains no longer trouble me, my appetite is good, I sleep good and get up in the morning feeling like a new person."

Neuritis and Stomach Gas Ended For This Lady

You may think because you have been suffering so long and terribly that nothing will help you now.

But you cannot read this letter of Mrs. Margaret Wallace without believing that there is hope for you, too, in Tanlac. "All the good things I could say about Tanlac would not express my true sentiments. For 13 years I suffered stomach troubles worse than anybody it seems to me. Gases filled and smothered me causing a pain around the heart and the pain would extend to my back and shoulders and then turn into neuritis. I suffered awfully. Whatever I ate resulted in heartburn. Tanlac is the only medicine that could cope with such severe troubles as mine. It relieved me fully, my stomach is in best condition in 13 years, no longer causing acid, gases and heartburn."

MUSIC AND COMEDY, WITH EXTENSION OF NINE-ACT DRAMA, HOLD SPOTLIGHT

Rafters of the Alvin Ring To Martial Chorus of "The New Moon"

By GEORGE SEIBEL

EVERY time that rousing chorus of "Stout Hearted Men Who Fight for the Right" rings through the aisles to the rafters of the Alvin Theater, it becomes increasingly evident that the Pittsburgh police ought to capture Jerome Kern and put him in the Bastile for inciting revolution. They started a revolution in Brussels with a chorus from "Masaniello" that doesn't have nearly as much fire and blood in it as this song. It makes that ditty of "Your Land and My Land" sound like "Little Sally Waters." Last night again, as it was sung by George Houston, the handsome and vocally impressive Robert of this company, it again swept the audience away by its tempestuous rhythm. That song is dangerous. Jerome Kern to the Bastile!

George Seibel

But it is not the only bit of stirring and haunting music in "The New Moon," that romantic operetta which captured Pittsburgh before it swept Broadway. "Lover, Come Back to Me," is a lyric of infinite tenderness. "Softly, as in a Morning Sunrise," also has entrancing charm. "Two of the humorous ballads "Love Is Here" that do not abuse their "Gorgeous Alexander" are Quite a Simple Thing" and Because by Comparison with rib-tickling rhythms.

A THING OF BEAUTY

Sigmund Romberg has made a first song here several seasons memorable score for "The New Moon," the passages for the violins and the harp being especially brilliant in coruscating fume. Outside of "Show Boat" we have had nothing to compare with this romantic operetta of old Louisiana and the Spanish Main.

IT WAS FINELY SUNG

Besides George Houston whose manly presence and heroic voice has been duly extolled there is a lovable and spirited Marianne sung by Charlotte Lansing who can reach quite to the top-mast of "The New Moon" with her high notes. Lucius Metz, John Grant and Elliott Stewart also are in command of good voices which are shown to advantage.

Then there is a pair of comedians—Madeleine McMahon as Julie and Roscoe Ails as Alexander—who are a joy to watch and to listen to. Julie is one of those diminutive blue-eyed snub-nosed Irish elves that capers nimbly and looks as guileless as a doll, but you ought to see the magnificent fight she stages on deck of the ship with the Amazonian Clotilde acted with berserker spirit by Gaile Beverly. And you ought to see Alexander Ails drink a glass of ale—and still he's dry. He is a comedian of the rare va-

O'Neill's Uncommon Play Impressive to Second Week Audience

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

EUGENE O'NEILL'S unusual drama, "Strange Interlude," the title of which, in the latter end of the nine-act play, is indicated to imply life, is in the second period of its three-weeks' run in the Nixon, where another impressed capacity audience last night witnessed the emotional throes of Nina Leeds and the three men she keeps dangling through seemingly interminable years.

They do not even terminate in the play, these years, for, though age has captured the characters, and has wrought inevitable human changes in them, life still remains to be played out—played out, one feels not quite so fantastically as it has progressed previously.

WITHOUT PHILOSOPHY

Folks who look for motive or philosophy in this dramatic hybrid will not find either, unless they are more penetrating in their analysis than the ordinary spectator. They will find merely two plays interwoven as one. They will find the unspoken drama of life as it affects the characters in the play, revealed and traveling side by side with the outward visible drama of a woman who is no one man's woman.

That visible outward drama is a very commonplace one, too, but cemented with the mental one made evident to the beholder by the much-discussed use of asides (characters saying what they think) it becomes powerful.

FORM IS IMPRESSIVE

That as has been stated before, is all there is to this O'Neill freak of the theater. Yet, it suffices to establish it as a significant development. The speaking of thoughts "asides" is an obsolete practice on the stage, but they are impressive in this case as forming a novel support for the whole drama. Modern dramatists make motives of the characters evident in their actions and there is no doubt that O'Neill has made employment of them that is unwarranted except as an experiment reflecting the strivings of a real research chemist of the theater seeking to achieve something valuable in dramatic form.

Regarded in that light "Strange Interlude" is worth the attention that has been given to it. The form O'Neill has wrought conceivably could be applied to drama of much higher spiritual quality than that in which Nina Leeds and her three men are set.

The company presenting the play here is most capable, and the staging of the production is exceptional.

Parachute Jumper Hurt in Air Crash

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., April 8.—Wilbur Winters, 26, a parachute jumper of Columbus, O., was in a critical condition in a hospital here and Dr. R. L. Jackson, local aviator, was recovering from injuries as the result of an airplane smash yesterday at the East Clarksburg Airport, near Bridgeport.

Jackson, who was arrested for flying passengers without a pilot's license and held for a hearing, was operating the plane when it went into a dive.

You don't have to wait until you have the ready cash to buy the plumbing fixtures. Just go to your plumber or come here to the "Standard" Showroom to learn how, by making a small payment down, you can have the plumbing fixtures you want installed at once.

You can pay the balance, including your plumber's charge for installing the fixtures in convenient monthly payments. So now there is no reason why the leaky, old water closet, the hard-to-keep-clean bathtub and the water-stained lavatory should be made to do for another year or even another week.

Come in today to see new "Standard" Plumbing Fixture designs in white and nine distinctive colors. Then you will realize how the fashion in plumbing fixtures has changed and how much easier it is today than it was ten years ago to make the bathroom a room that is really beautiful.

Miss Ponselle

Rosa Ponselle, dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, gave another good account of herself in the last of May Beegle's brilliant concerts at Syria Mosque last night. She was not in her very best voice, but there was plenty to satisfy the most exacting audience, and enough to make us always remember her as one of the greatest opera singers of the generation.

J. Fred Lissfelt

Though Ponselle does lovely things with songs she is primarily an opera star. The smooth delivery of Spontini's "O Nume Tutelar," marks her a master of bel canto. Such singing raises opera beyond the tinsel of the stage, above dramatic reality, and towards the ideal in art. Her air from "Il Trovatore" gave a brief moment of bravura, and the habanera from "Carmen" an encore, displayed her abilities as a realistic singing actress.

In her songs, Ponselle's pianissimo is used with infinite discretion, and is always indescribably beautiful. Her outbursts of large tone are well planned and within the tradition of the music. There is humor quite often, at times cunningly pointed, at times broad and exhilarating. In her lullabies, tenderness abounds; in her songs of joy, love of life.

We believe that such a voice is capable of doing greater songs than we read on Ponselle's programs. An occasional Wagner, Schubert and Brahms song tantalizes our curiosity for more such lyrics. Always grateful for the "Vergebliches Standchen," another encore, there is no doubt that Ponselle set it outside Germany, for Brahms' fraulein would have feared her mother's cat-o'-nine-tails too seriously to be so saucy with a prospective bridegroom. Just the same, she understood the song.

Stuart Ross, who has accompanied Ponselle for years, was again a watchful helper, and played two groups for piano solo. His solo playing is far more interesting than on former occasions, and he fortunately chooses music that we do not hear in every recital.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

"DEACON" CHURCHILL DEALS DIVERSION IN THE PITT

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

The rumble of train wheels, manufactured realistically by Mr. Sharp's backstage crew, herald the arrival of Berton Churchill on the Pitt stage this week. Mr. Churchill is there as guest star with Mr. Sharp's troupe, essaying the title role in "Alias the Deacon," a comedy drama. It is the play's first presentation in Pittsburgh.

The production is a sort of Horatio Alger version of a Robin Hood, if there can be such a thing. Only its Robin Hood is not a bandit, but a gambler, a card shark. He poses as a deacon and goes about the country doing a good turn daily. He rescues the fair heroine from peril, helps Young Romance find a cottage for two and saves the Old Homestead, which, in this case, happens to be a hotel, for the widow.

And in between times? Ah, he has no idle moments. He is always ready for a nip from that pocket flask of his when no one is peeping. And he is always ready to "take" matronly ladies in bridge and everyone else in poker.

THE BOXCAR ROUTE

In fact, he is so clever at the cards, or rather at the dealing, that you can't help thinking his entry and exit by the boxcar route are inconsistent.

"Alias the Deacon" is really just another play. It even isn't a very good play as far as dramatic values and technique go. But it is good entertainment. It keeps you amused and interested. And Mr. Churchill gives a character study that is always diverting and that is portrayed with finesse. He assumes pious mien and has a fluent flow of speech. If the occasion demands it, there is a Biblical quotation at the tip of his tongue.

Yet, though his theology is sham, there is philosophy in that gambler's heart of his. When fate, and not he is the dealer, he wants everyone to get a square deal.

AMONG THE CAST

The play is presented in three acts and a prologue. Scenes are laid in a freight car, en route somewhere, and in the parlor and the office of a hotel in Kansas.

Edith King, Henry Wadsworth, Mabel Kroman, Alice Ann Baker, Lucette Parker, Robert Fiske and Walter F. Jones are among familiar faces in support of the guest star. Some new faces are noted also in the supporting cast. These include Charles Webster, who prize fights and gets drunk, and Robert Campbell, as a youngster who has his first love affair. Incidentally, young Mr. Campbell, so we understand, was recruited from Allgheny High School.

Lovely Marion Lee of "My Girl Friday" prefers the PLAIN BOB. Proper care keeps her hair in wonderful condition.

The easy way to have soft, wavy, gleaming hair...

THE modern sculptured bobs do wonders to bring out your personality. But like other present-day models of arranging the hair, they call attention to it. That's why it's so important nowadays to keep your hair soft, lustrous, abundant. The easiest and quickest way to give new lustre and color to hair, which has begun to look dull and lifeless, is with Danderine. And it makes the hair softer, easier to arrange; holds it in place.

Here's all you do. Each time you use your brush just put a little Danderine on it. It removes the oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; gives it more gloss than brilliantine. Waves "set" with it stay in longer.

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It stops falling hair. A small bottle is enough to show its merit. Start on it tonight.

ENS RESTS SUHR, CLARKE

SPORT COMMENT
by JAMES J. LONG

Traynor Able to Start. Means Much to Team. Release of O'Connell.

Another Gridder Fails. Luque Smart Slabman. Hard Foe for Fields.

PIE'S RETURN BRIGHTENS BUC OUTLOOK

THOUGH Pitcher Burleigh Grimes was still unsigned when he returned to his home in Minerva, O. following his talk with President Barney Dreyfuss, of the Pirates, here yesterday, the day was not wholly unproductive of encouraging news for Pittsburgh baseball fans. The development that the condition of Capt. Pie Traynor's ailing eye had improved so greatly that the star third baseman would probably be able to play in the opener at Cincinnati one week from today brightened to a vast extent the Buccaneer outlook for a successful start in the pennant race.

Pie Traynor

Earlier reports had indicated that a return to the lineup in the home curtain raiser two weeks from tomorrow was the best that could be hoped for in Traynor's case, but Pie now declares that nothing can keep him from being in there when the first bell rings in Redland. The eye still is slightly dilated, but all the inflammation has disappeared, and there is every promise of a complete recovery in time to enable the Buc captain to appear in the lid-lifter.

IT will mean much to the Rovers to have Traynor at his post when the flag fight begins. Pie's absence spells a heavy loss at any time but it would have hit the locals even harder than usual in the early games this spring as there is already a green youngster at first base and another at third alongside Dick Bartell the infield would have presented too much youth and inexperience to hold out any assurance of steadiness.

Aside from his bothersome eye, Traynor is in fine shape, and judging from the clip at which he was hitting the ball before he was forced to withdraw from the practice games he may be expected to show the best spring form he has displayed in several years. And his return means more to the club than his individual playing worth represents, as his spirit in a game is an inspiration to his mates and his presence at third base will enable the pitchers to work with greater confidence than they would be likely to show if the team were required to start out with a patched infield.

WHILE local friends of Johnny O'Connell, released to Fort Worth by the Pittsburgh club, regret the young catcher's failure to win a major league berth in his latest trial, they realize that a return to the minors at this time is likely to help the future of the Verona boy.

Johnny O'Connell

For one thing, O'Connell will have a chance to work regularly with Fort Worth, which promises faster development than could be hoped for if he were kept sitting on the Pirate bench. Johny himself is known to have preferred a job in the minors. And for another thing, he will be playing under the management of Frank Snyder, whose years of experience as a major league catcher qualifies him to teach O'Connell many things about the backstopping job that could not be learned under another pilot.

THE release of O'Connell has another consoling feature from a Pirate viewpoint in the fact that it indicates two other players have satisfied Manager Jewel Ens that they will be able to deliver big league stuff. These are Al Buol and Gus Suhr. Ens would not have let O'Connell go if he had not been convinced that Buol had the ability to share the catching work with Charley Hargreaves and Ralston Hemsley, and he must have felt sure, too, of Suhr's being the right man for the first-base job, as he had been grooming O'Connell for that vacancy on the chance that Gus might fail to come through.

GLENN WRIGHT, former Pirate shortstop, has been made captain of the Brooklyn Dodgers for the 1930 season, another indication that Manager Wilbert Robinson is confident that the ex-Buccaneer will be able to play regularly this season. Wright received a similar appointment last year, but when his shoulder injury put him on the shelf, the captaincy was transferred to Max Carey, though the latter was not a regular.

The reappointment of Wright for this year as field leader of the Robins completes a rare round of honors conferred upon a former Pittsburgh infield. Every member of the Bucs' inner defense of 1924 is now holding a team captaincy in the National League. In addition to Wright at Brooklyn, Pie Traynor holds a similar post in Pittsburgh, Charley Grimm is captain of the Cubs, and Rabbit Maranville carries the batting order to the plate for the Braves.

ERNIE NEVERS is the latest to discover that an athlete who has proved himself one of the greatest football players in the land is not always assured of similar success in baseball.

Ernie Nevers

The former Stanford gridiron standout and all-around athletic star has now failed even in the minors as a baseball pitcher. He was tried first by the St. Louis Browns and shipped to the Mission club, of the Pacific Coast League. The Missions kept him two seasons, but yesterday released him unconditionally for "failure to round into form in spring training."

MANY another football luminary has had the same experience. Time was when one rarely got by in baseball, at least as far as the big leagues were concerned, and where Christy Mathewson, Ed Abbaticchio, Dave Foltz, Spike Shannon and a few others succeeded a far greater number failed. Jim Thorpe, Daff Gammons and Lefty Mellveen, in particular, though they lingered awhile, did not come close to making good the extraordinary promise of their college days. In late years gridiron stars have been more successful in baseball, with Frankie Frisch, Charley Berry, Walter French, and others making good for a time, at least, but at that the failures still represent the long end of the percentage.

MANAGER ROBINSON of the Brooklyn club is reported to be more satisfied than ever with the trade he made with Cincinnati a few months ago, whereby he obtained Adolfo Luque, the veteran Cuban pitcher, in exchange for Douglas McWeeny.

Luque, listed in the record books as being almost 39, and said by fellow players to be considerably older, has won only 16 ball games in the last two years while losing 26, but he has convinced the Robins in camp this spring that he still can fling that onion.

IN fact, Luque has shown up so well that Manager Robinson has changed his plans for the veteran's role with the club. It was Robbie's original intention to use Luque as a bull pen pitcher for the pur-

Eddie Roush May Quit Baseball

OAKLAND CITY, Ind., April 8.—(AP.)—Eddie Roush, outfielder, who has not yet signed a contract for 1930 with the New York National League baseball club, said at his home here last night that "If we don't get together I might as well quit baseball."

The Giant holdout said he and the club officials were "not so far apart" on salary terms, but added that "It looks like they are not going to pay any more, and I won't accept any less than I have named."

Roush said he probably would spend the summer at Oakland City.

MIKE M'TIGUE BOWS

MIAMI, Fla., April 8.—(AP.)—Bob Godwin, 185, young battler from Daytona Beach, Fla., won the decision in a hotly fought eight here last night with Mike McTigue, 179, of New York City.

KAYO STREAK ENDS WITH DEFEAT

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Instead of garnering his ninth straight knockout victory in his bout with Archie Bell, of New York, before a packed house at Motor Square Garden last night, as the betting gentry thought he would to the tune of even money and even 3-to-2 odds, Jackie Rodgers, local Negro puncher, today was nursing the wounds of decisive defeat and consequent loss of prestige.

Rodgers won only one round of the 10-round fight, the sixth, in which he was able to land on his clever foe in some sort of consecutive fashion and kept up a rushing attack. In every other round he was the recipient of such a boxing lesson as has not been seen here since the night Andy Martin, of Boston, toyed with Johnny Datto, Filipino paralyzer, in similar fashion in the same ring a few years ago.

FREAK ACCIDENT

JACKIE OUT AT FINISH

The end of the bout saw Rodgers dizzy and tired and arm and leg weary and barely able to get up his hands as the light-hitting Bell stood toe to toe and slugged until he forced Jackie to back away and made his defeat the more complete by having him virtually out on his feet. The crowd gave the victor a great hand not only at the end of the bout but throughout.

Jackie never had a chance from the moment he rushed out of his corner in the openin, round and swished a left hook to the head that failed to bother his opponent. With all the skill and ring knowledge of a half-dozen years of campaigning against the best in his class in this country and in England, Bell immediately worked his way to close quarters and there he remained throughout the bout, messing up Jackie with short jabs and jolting rights, keeping the local man constantly off hitting balance, bobbing under Jackie's infrequent hooks and swings and coming up to stab, stab, stab and stab to the head and beat a two-handed tattoo on the body. Rodgers simply couldn't keep him off and get set to fight his fight. It was as beautiful a display of smothering a dangerous opponent as this writer ever has witnessed, and demonstrated that, while Rodgers is a knockout king against ordinary opposition, he still has plenty of obstacles to surmount in the way of clever boxers in his new class, the feather-

Johnny Dunn Ready to Box Bell

"Johnny Dunn challenged the winner before the bout, and that challenge goes," declared Jimmy Conrad, manager of Dunn, after Archie Bell's one-sided victory over Jackie Rodgers in the 10-round main bout at Motor Square Garden last night.

"Rodgers refused to fight Dunn after the latter had earned every right to meet him again after beating him twice," Conrad said, "and chose Bell as his opponent in a 'big shot' here instead. Now he has lost to Bell and we are not interested in fighting Rodgers, but we gladly will take on Bell, with whom Dunn fought a close but losing fight at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., last year. We would get no credit beating Rodgers again now, but Bell has established himself as a card here, and Dunn is the logical local man to be sent against him. I am ready to close the match any time the promoters say the word."

Dunn said after the bout he was not surprised by Bell's victory.

"Having fought Bell, I expected it," he said. "Archie is a very cagy boxer. He keeps on top of you and doesn't give you much chance to start a punch. I found out in our bout, though, that he is fairly open for a straight right to the head, and I had him hurt in two of the late rounds. I am confident I can beat him now, after that experience and seeing him box Rodgers tonight."

The direction of the boat and the direction of the wind never coincide. The closest a boat will go to the wind is 30 degrees, or 2¼ points. At 120 degrees (10 2-3 points from the wind), the boat will attain its greatest speed. The velocity of the boat then is twice the velocity of the wind that blows it. TOMORROW—BORN AND DIES IN A DAY.

The Lowdown On the Pirates

By The Benchwarmer

DALLAS, Tex., April 8.—Folks, I think I'm gonna escape the Texas League, because Jewel Ens hasn't said anything. You know this is a pretty good league, and, if I thought Jewel was going to ship me to the Columbia farm later, I think I would make a squawk now to be left here, but, on account of the sore arm, they got me goin' and comin'.

I know that I can go in Double A ball right now and was hopin' that the boss would farm me out to Baltimore, as that ain't far from home and they might throw a day for me if I got hooked up with the Orioles. I understand that Fritz Maisel, the manager of the Orioles, was after me last year but the Pirates had the first call an' got me in the draft.

HELPS CLUB'S MORALE

I haven't shown a thing, you might say, but one of the other rookies was tellin' me he heard Jewel tellin' Chick Fraser that he was gonna keep me around for a while because I helped the morale of the club, whatever that is. It took me about a week to find out about that "Jake" stuff and I am cloudy about the morale thing, too. You bet I won't ask Fraser, for he's always pullin' fast ones on us kids. It was Chick that told me they called me "Jake" because I reminded them of Ol' Jake Beckley, and all the time they was meaning that I was "jakin'."

Well, I told a certain guy on the club to cut out the "jake" stuff and they've been laying off it. I fought some preliminary bouts when I was a kid and the gang knows it, so they give me credit forh avin' an ace in my sleeve. There ain't much danger of me levelin' off on anybody, but I'm not "jakin'" and they gotta cut that stuff out.

THOSE TRICK CIRCUITS

I wouldn't be surprised if Jewel would slip me to Columbia about Decoration Day, but that's a long ways off, and there's no use lookin' for bridges before you come to the river. I don't like to think of that league after Johnny O'Connell told me about those 300-mile bus jumps over dirt roads. He says you often see the sun comin' up after riding all night in a bus. John says it's the "Up-an-at-'em" League. You're up all night and at 'em all day. That's a good crack, but I'd rather think about it than go through it.

Jewel was all set to put me in a game or two when the club was in Houston, on account of so many being hurt, but, gee, the old arm was so sore I couldn't throw across a bathroom in an efficiency apartment. The gang is pretty good to me, though. The Waner boys, Comorosky and the rest of the outfielders keep tellin' me, "Don't weaken, Lefty," and I always try to be in good humor, but when I get to thinking about Columbia I get blue. Anyhow, I guess I'm safe till Decoration Day.

PIE TRAYNOR MISSED

The gang misses Pie Traynor, and I don't mean maybe. I never met Pie till this spring, but he certainly did put me wise to a lot of stuff that will help me. I make a lot of wise cracks and act like a natura. lefthander most of the time, but I know a regular guy when one comes along. He's always loafin' with us kids instead of runn' around with the stars. Guess that's why the team has been blue for a week. But we're all hopin' Pie will be bac soon.

N. Y. A. C. TOPS HOMESTEAD

CHICAGO, April 8.—(AP.)—The New York Athletic Club water polo team last night successfully negotiated the first barrier in its path to a second successive National A. A. U. title, scoring an easy 9-to-4 victory over the Carnegie Library team of Homestead, Pa., at the Illinois Athletic Club.

The New York outfit and the Illinois Athletic Club four, which defeated its ancient rival, the Chicago Athletic Association, 10 to 9, will meet for the title tonight.

FIELDS MUST FIGHT

CHICAGO, April 8.—(AP.)—The Illinois State Athletic Commission has ruled that Jackie Fields, world welterweight champion, must sign up for a title engagement with a logical contender, or it will recommend to the National Boxing Association that the title be declared vacated.

DERBY TO SEE TURF CLASSIC

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 8.—(AP.)—The Earl of Derby will present the Gold Cup this year to the owner of the winning horse in the Kentucky Derby, Lord Derby, who will be a visitor to the fifty-sixth renewal May 17, of the $50,000 added classic of the American turf also will speak over a coast-to-coast hookup of the National Broadcasting Company, under plans announced yesterday at Churchill Downs.

The English earl, after whose family the historic English Derby was named, has been formally invited to attend the race by Gov. Sampson and Mayor Harrison and will be extensively entertained while here.

KREMER SLATED TO OPPOSE DALLAS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

DALLAS, Tex., April 8.—The oppressive heat of Texas today caused Manager Jewel Ens, of the Pirates, to take steps to prevent any weakening on the part of his tired athletes. Ens upon the arrival here from Fort Worth, declared he would yank Gus Suhr and Third Baseman Stewie Clark out of the lineup this afternoon in the game with Dallas. The move will throw Jim Mosolf and Ben Sankey into action.

Remy Kremer

The Pittsburgh team has not missed a scheduled contest since it left Paso Robles. Twenty-one battles have been fought in that period and those staged in Texas have been accompanied by unusual heat. The thermometer registered 97 while the Pirates played in Fort Worth yesterday.

The switch in the lineup today will send Mosolf to first and Charley Engle to third. Engle, however, has been playing stellar ball since Dick Bartell was injured. Remy Kremer will be on the mound against the Steers.

O'CONNELL SOLD

Johnny O'Connell changed from a Pirate into a Panther in record time yesterday at Fort Worth and then proceeded to hold down his Pittsburgh buddies. The score was 9 to 5. O'Connell was inserted into the last rounds of the battle, and in his one time at bat he slammed out a pretty single to right that sent another Panther from first to third.

O'Connell was given an ovation by Fort Worth fans. Manager Frank Snyder and the Pirate officials closed the deal for Johnny shortly before noon, and the Verona youth reported for duty immediately. O'Connell skipped along to second like a real base-runner as the Pirates tried to make a play at third. His debut was just about the kind an athlete would like. Port Worth thinks it has a big chance to win the Texas League honors, and O'Connell is likely to see a lot of action behind the plate.

LOCAL BOWLERS SHARE IN A. B. C. PRIZES

SUMMERS PRO AT SUNCLIFFE RANGE

CLEVELAND, April 8. — With much eclat the thirtieth annual tournament of the American Bowling Congress came to a close here last night, and among those present to collect for pin damage done the wood in the doubles and singles events were a number of Pittsburgh district kegglers.

LOCALS COP PRIZES

Pittsburgh, Canton and Wheeling boys laid into the wood with a vengeance, prying it loose from its sockets for varying sums. From an individual standpoint R. McCoy, of Canton, was the outstanding star, as he kicked in with a 696 to lead the field for the day in the singles. He did this on top of a 1,248 doubling with Tom Jones. The latter figure was third best doubles total of the day.

For Pittsburgh, J. Friedrich, with 628, H. Gertsbrein, with 602 and W. Friedrich, with 597, poked a way into the money. W. Schaefer and C. Ray, of Wheeling, shot a 1,189 to get in, and two other Wheeling pairs, L. Wood and O. Sams, with 1,159, and G. Rumberger and J. Ray, with 1,146 also landed.

GRIMES AND DREYFUSS CONFER

BURLEIGH GRIMES BARNEY DREYFUSS PIE TRAYNOR

Burleigh Grimes, holdout pitcher of the Pirates, and Owner Barney Dreyfuss, of the local club, had their first conference yesterday since the latter's return from his Florida vacation, but they did not get around to the point of discussing Burleigh's contract for the season soon to open. Capt. Pie Traynor, who is here for treatment for iritis, sat in on the confab, which was a friendly one. Notice Pie's bad eye in the photo. Grimes left immediately after the conference for his home in Minerva, O.

Sport Vignettes

The big fire in Sixth street yesterday woke up Irish Kane, trainer in Flynn's gym, next door to the blaze, and sent him scurrying to the street . . . . When he heard the clang of the engines he thought it was the bell for the sixth round of one of Jack DeNeri's fights . . . . Stanislaus Zbyszko, who was supposed to have quit wrestling to become matchmaker for Madison Square Garden, will go back to it in a finish match with Renato Gardini in Buffalo Thursday night . . . . That evidently is his idea of "retiring" . . . . Speaking of retiring, Jimmy Slattery, the light-heavyweight champion, when asked about a report from New York that he was about to retire from the ring, said "Quit your kidding; that retire stuff is an automobile tire ad" . . . . Burleigh Grimes, in town yesterday for a visit, was telling what a swell spot he found Hot Springs for training . . . . "With me down there were the House of David and Homestead Grays squads, along with the Minneapolis and Little Rock clubs," he said . . . . Burleigh probably could get a job with one of those teams if anything ever happened to him on the Pirates, but he's not ready for that company yet . . . . He is in a fighting mood, incidentally, following the collapse of his divorce suit last week . . . . He plans to carry on his court battle and also to dig in and pitch in his customary winning style when he gets back into the Pirate fold . . . . His domestic troubles have him upset, but he's far from being down for the count . . . . "That's a gob of money," quoth Jack Sharkey when he heard that he was going to be sued for $500,000 by Rocky Stone, his former sparring partner . . . . Jack Gagnon is the heavyweight champion of the world . . . . If you don't believe it, pipe this: Gagnon knocked out Tuffy Griffiiths, who defeated Johnny Risko, who defeated Jack Sharkey . . . . The office razor still belongs to the sports department, as does also its solitary blade . . . . Appointments for their use now are being booked in advance . . . . There'll be no boxing show at the Moose Temple next week, Holy Week . . . . Promoter Flynn instead will drive to New York for a visit . . . . The Greeks still are great athletes . . . . The Athens (Tex.) team won the national interscholastic basketball tournament the other day . . . . In view of his iritis, could one say that Capt. Traynor, of the Pirates, is Pie-eyed?—HARRY KECK.

Manager Daly makes it plain that Red Barworth will not be with the Homewood-Brushton club this season. Barworth has signed with Pleasant Valley Smokers, City League champions. He is a good catcher but Daly is going to let Bill Schultze again do the receiving for the club. Schultze is a veteran but he is going to break up many ball games in the West Penn League and Barworth seems to be pretty well satisfied with Johnny Dunlap for a manager and should help the champions in the tough league grind.

The American Legion of Swissvale will hold a meeting April 15 to organize a league of Legion boys. At present six teams are lined up, and it seems as though the Juniors are going to get a good look.

RIECK PILOT EXPECTS TO REPEAT

By TOM BIRKS.

Manager Bill Stuhlfire, of the Rieck-McJunkin nine, Commercial and Industrial League champions of 1929, does not seem to be getting alarmed regarding the new material coming into the C. & I. League. In a little talkfest, the peppery Milk manager figured that Reliance Life, National Union, B. & O., Dravo Contracting and Mine Safety were all wonderful clubs, teams which have been good enough to win pennants in former years.

"But," he said, "we have the title, and we are going to keep it."

"Last season Eddie Laboon practically carried us along single-handed to win the championship from some tough opposition," Stuhlfire continued. He beat pitchers like Gil Scannell and Engleman, and now I have Josh Briley to work his regular turn on the mound with Laboon.

"Briley compares with any man on the sandlots in all-round ability. He starred with Liberty Dairy in the City League and I expect him to give the other clubs plenty of things to worry over. Then considering that a pitcher is only half a battery, Kolinsky, star catcher of last season's W. O. W. outfit, is with us, and Koly's experience will help greatly against the heavier hitters to be encountered in the C. & I. this year.

"The infield will be built around Davey Brown at first base; Duke, a new man from St. Adelbert's; Herman Klocke, and O'Neill. Brown is one of the most popular boys in the loop, and others now on the company's payroll also will be trying for infield berths."

Stuhlfire will bank upon Puhl, Baumgartner and McGoun coming through in the outfield.

"That looks to me like a pretty good aggregation of sandlot players," he concluded, "and we have the title, the boys are keep to keep it, and if any of the others want it, the diamond will be the place to get it—and what a fight it is going to be."

So there is the first story on the possibilities of the C. & I. for the coming season—it is the greatest league of its kind in the country.

SHOW CANCELED AT DUQUESNE GARDEN

The boxing show planned for the downstairs arena of Duquesne Garden tomorrow night was called off at noon today by Matchmaker Nate Leff when his card of three 10-rounders and an eight-round preliminary was wrecked by substitutions.

Leff announced that he will get to work immediately to put together a good show for a later date. The club began its operations in the upstairs hall of the Garden and wants its first offering in the larger arena to be a good one.

Johnny Windsor, of Herron Hill, was to meet Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, in the main bout tomorrow night, but pulled out claiming he could not get in shape in time, and Johnny Chiodo, of Johnstown, canceled another 10-rounder, with Soldier Dombroski, of Detroit, because of boils. The other bouts stood up, a 10-rounder between George Panka, Homestead heavyweight, and Tiny Grove, of Detroit, and the eight-round opener between Cowboy DeLuca, of Lawrenceville, and Jackie Murray, of the Hill.

Between Rounds

Young Burkat, of Midland, Pa., has been named as the opponent of Jackie Wilson, of the North Side, in the semi-final to the Young Patriot-Mickey Schmidt bout at the Moose Temple Friday night. Don Frazier, Cuban, of Chicago, will oppose Frankie Lass, of Sharpsburg, in the second bout.

The preliminaries will be disposed of in the Greater Pittsburgh amateur boxing and wrestling championship tournament at McKeesport tomorrow night, with the semi-finals and finals being reserved for Thursday night.

Many local fans are driving over to Cleveland for the Jackie Fields-Tommy Freeman non-title bout tonight, despite the fact that Pittsburgh is staging three shows of its own this week.

A return bout between Jack (Kid) Berg and Joe Glick is planned for Madison Square Garden, New York, at an early date. They fought a thriller there last Friday night, with Berg winning.

Benny Gerstle, of Cleveland, and Al Taylor, of Elyria, O., have been matched to box a 10-rounder at Lorain, O., next Monday night.

Gene Maretti, the Atlantic City welterweight, boxes Ricardo Alia at Chester, Pa., tomorrow night.

Al Fay, Charleroi heavyweight under the management of Jack Kearns, boxes Fred Fiore, of Pittsburgh, Kan., in a 10-rounder at the Chicago Stadium tonight. Walter Mahon and Baxter Calmes are in the 10-round semi-final. Fay was to box Napoleon Dorval in Chicago last night, but Dorval cancelled the match.

Willie Davies, Charleroi flyweight star, boxes Johnny Edwards, of Huntington, W. Va., in a 10-round bout at Clarksburg, W. Va., Thursday night. Louis Vine, of Fairmont, and Billy Jones, of Huntington, are on the six-round semi-final.

Midget Wolgast, the new flyweight champion, will box Johnny McCoy in a non-title bout in Buffalo one week from next Monday.

LOCAL NET MOGULS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

P. T. A. CONFAB CARDED FOR TONIGHT

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Tennis bugs of the Western Pennsylvania district will swarm upon the P. A. A. at 8:15 o'clock this evening for the regular annual meeting of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association, parent governing body of the Steel City local set-up. Interest in the impending contests exceeds all previous records of the past decade, and it is considered probable that tonight's gathering will be the largest and most significant business session that the quiet devotees have staged here since palmy pre-war days.

Foremost on the program of discussion is the matter of date and place for the Western Pennsylvania championships held most successfully a year ago on the splendid courts of the Stanton Heights Golf Club, thanks to the kindly offices of Bruce Hill and other tennis-minded Stantonites who came to the rescue when sites previously employed proved unavailable. Whether or not the Black street rectangles will again behold West Penn competition is still a matter of conjecture. But it is pretty widely understood that P. T. A. moguls favor them strongly as the scene of battle. The Stanton hospitality is once more forthcoming.

A tournament committee to decide details for the Western Pennsylvania (final) contests will be appointed tonight. It will be up to this group to land a tourney location, to decide on definite dates, which incidentally may be later than usual in order to avoid bad weather and conflict with the National Intercollegiates and meetings for Buffalo and Cleveland, and to obtain prizes to supplement the handsome David L. McCahill and Honus Wagner three-foot trophies first placed up for competition in 1929 and at present held respectively by Byron Bahl of Erie and Mrs. Martha Guthrie Snowdon of Pittsburgh.

Sam Keller, former Duquesne court ace, is also said to be primed to offer a proposition for the revival of the old Allegheny County championships, the affair to be run off on the clay surfaces of the Duquesne (Pa.) Library, either in August or over Labor Day. Such a suggestion would unquestionably obtain strong endorsement from the association, not to mention general acclaim from netmen of the countryside.

CARDS TO BE SET

The P. T. A. Inter-Club League schedule will come in for attention before the séance has progressed far, and it is whispered that a new alignment or two will crop up at the final moment to complicate the task of the Section Two card-makers quite a little. Then too there will be election of officers for the coming campaign, as well as reports of committees on inter-city team play, the re-establishment of the once-annual P. T. A. dinner, and the acquisition of a permanent trophy symbolic of supremacy in Section One of the Inter-Club loop.

DEATH TAKES STRILEY

Baseball legend has lost another sterling performer in the death of James Striley, former star third baseman of the Boston National club and other teams, yesterday at his home in Pittsburgh.

BELL DEFEATS RODGERS

weight division before he can be considered championship timber.

KAYO PUNCH SMOTHERED

There were no knockdowns in the bout. Bell for all of his skid seemingly doesn't hit hard enough to break an egg, and Rodgers didn't have anything left in his punches after the first few rounds of missing and being made to fight to Bell's order. Jackie had his celebrated lame ankle taped and did not appear to bother him. The pair originally were scheduled to meet in the same ring two weeks ago, but first Bell canceled and then Rodgers pulled out on Heine Hart, a substitute for Bell whom Johnny Dunn of New Kensington took on and outclassed as badly as Bell did Rodgers last night.

An unusual incident marked last night's bout. Shortly after the fifth round opened one of the large electric light bulbs over the ring popped and the glass showered down on the fighters and the bout had to be halted while the fragments were cleared from the ring. It developed later that rain leaking through the roof and falling on the bulb had caused the freak explosion.

DEMKO DOWN

Johnny Demko, of Weirton, W. Va., had his ups and downs in his bout with Russell Powers, of Youngstown, at Motor Square Garden last night. Above he is seen taking his third long count in the second round. Bout was halted in the fifth.

After the fight Bell who scaled 121½ pounds against 122½ for Rodgers at 3 p. m. said none of Rodgers' punches had hurt him. However he added that Jackie is a good, strong, dangerous fighter who has to be boxed with care.

MARIO BEATS BELMONT

Matty Mario, former Charleroi lad, who went to New York and made good in the ring and has just returned to his home, dished out a boxing lesson to Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, over the eight-round route in the semi-final. He outgeneraled Jimmy throughout and bothered him no little with short-arm jolting punches to the head in the clinches that were something in these parts. He won every round after an even opening frame. Mario scaled 145 pounds and his opponent 151½.

The first two bouts ended in technical knockouts with the referee halting the second event in the fifth round to save Johnny Demko, of Weirton, W. Va., from a further beating by Russell Powers, of Youngstown, and Jack Benton, of Braddock, stopping Young Sapienza, of Zelienople, in the fourth round of the opener.

Russell, a counter puncher with a good straight right, floored Demko, a roundhouse swinger, for counts of nine, eight and eight in the second round and for nine in the fifth and had Johnny badly cut up when the referee intervened. Sapienza outboxed the rugged Benton for the first two rounds, but then weakened and was down for a count of two at the end of the third round and took three counts of nine in the fourth.

Powers weighed 149¼ pounds and Demko, who subbed on short notice for Johnny Breisch, of the North Side, who has an injured rib, 152. Sapienza weighed 117 pounds and Benton 117¾.

SEASON'S LARGEST GATE

Jock Simco and Frank Brown were the judges, and Red Robinson and Eddie Kennedy alternated as referees, with Robinson handling the main and second bouts. Bill Schuster was the announcer and A. C. Couch and Max Zeugschmidt the timers. The show drew more than $7,200, the best gate of the season here.

Long's Sport Comment

WHILE Primo Carnera is committing his fourteenth alleged knockout in Los Angeles tonight at the expense of Neil Clisby, the California Negro selected for the occasion, there ought to be something like a real fight in Cleveland, where Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, is to clash for 12 rounds with Tommy Freeman. Even though the title is not to be at stake, the bout, if everything is on the straightaway, should prove of the best seen in the welter class in a long time. Fields shapes up as the probable winner, or as likely to get no worse than a draw, but Pittsburghers have seen evidence that Freeman packs a lot of fighting class and it will be surprising if he doesn't at least press the champion hard all the distance.

Many of the Pirates also were in a batting mood as the big leaguers collected 11 safeties. Grantham and Comorosky poled out six hits during the hot afternoon, the Arizona greyhound solving the home sharpshooters for a triple, a double and a single.

ROSENBLOOM WINS

BUFFALO, April 8.—(AP.)—Maxie Rosenbloom stopped out a 10-round decision over Harry Fuller, mild punching Niagara Falls eight-boy, tonight here last night. CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 8.—Babe Ruth will miss the rest of the Yankees' exhibition games on account of a charley horse.

Nick Altrock.

When Ruppert signed him up at $80,000 a year, Jake didn't know he was gambling on horses. With Babe out from a bad ligament and Hornsby down with a bum heel, it looks like the managers will do more worrying about legs this season than Ziegfeld and Earl Carroll.

I see John McGraw celebrated his fifty-seventh birthday yesterday. If Mac had been managing the Boston Braves all his life instead of the Giants, he would feel like 90 years old.

WHEELING RACE MEETING OPENS TOMORROW

$2,000 PURSE TO MARK INAUGURAL

WHEELING, W. Va., April 8.—Everything is in readiness for the opening of the Golden Jubilee race meeting tomorrow afternoon. With 510 horses on the grounds and 60-odd competent jockeys here to ride them, there will be no lack of thoroughbreds entered in the various races nor will there be a dearth of good riding material.

The $2,000 Inaugural purse, opening feature of the meeting, is up for decision tomorrow. This opening stake is at six furlongs and has attracted as many as a dozen of the best older horses in training here. It is quite likely that the field will be composed of the fastest sprinters here and Racing Secretary Benter is confident the event will develop into a keen speed test and a thrilling finish.

Among those that have been working in preparation for the Inaugural are San Carlos, winner of two handicaps at Havana; Old Kickapoo, O. L. Foster's gallant handicap horse; O. L. Pons' crack sprinter, Tetra Glass; Al Gunther's four title winner at Havana, Margaret Cal; H. T. Miller's veteran Stampdale and his good colt Patsy H., and H. C. Rumage's Lactarius.

Horses continue to arrive. The Mulleric stable came in with three, they being Vladimir, The Runt and Clarified. H. Haymaker brought seven over from Bowie. They were Sun Kin, The Doctor, Referendu, Reigh Shot, Ebuford, Fire Rock and Mad Mullah. J. F. Harris came with Haymaker bringing Transfer and Racing Star. H. W. Fry was also in the car with Begin Over and Lassa.

JOCK KENNEDY,
Fox Chapel Golf Club

Jock Kennedy

There's a saying around the district that "they don't come any better than Jock Kennedy," pro at the Fox Chapel Golf Club, near Aspinwall, and we're ready to add our "You bet your life!" to that little say-so. Jock is another of the good Scotchmen from the Clan Carnoustie. He started playing in that international golf clearing house no less than 22 years ago. For two years he worked as clubmaker for Robert Simpson, in Carnoustie, and Simpson's fame as a clubmaker has circled the globe a couple of times. One February, 20 years ago, Jock came to this country to work for Peter Robinson, who then was pro at the Oakmont Country Club. He later worked at the Edgewood Country Club, which was located on the present site of the Pup's Foot Golf Club, staying there for two years. Five years were spent at the Wanango Country Club, the beautiful layout in the oil districts of Franklin and Oil City. He was with the Country Club of Pittsburgh for eight years, severing relations there to become affiliated with the Fox Chapel Golf Club, where he has been for the last four years. Full of Scotch humor, an exceptionally brilliant instructor and a splendid tournament player, Kennedy holds a high place in Western Pennsylvania professional golf. — VERN SWARTSFAGER.

DISTRICT PIN STARS HELP CLOSE EVENT

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Joseph (Sunny) Summers, former caddie-master at the Shannopin Country Club, up in Ben Avon Heights, has been appointed professional golf instructor at the new Suncliff driving range at Petterman's Corner, near the Alcoma Country Club, on the Frankstown road.

Joe Summers

The new Suncliff driving range, with 15 tees, and a large acreage for striking the ball 300 yards or more, will be opened to the public Saturday. Caddies, of course, will be in attendance. The opening of the new range will mark the third in this district since C. H. McDonald opened his Bob-O-Link layouts. Suncliff is under altogether different management.

Summers, a fine chap, as his nickname tells you, will be in charge of the range, and will give lessons in golf as well as direct affairs generally.

CHANGES AT ALCOMA

The Alcoma County Club is making many changes in its course for this season and members are anticipating a big golf and social year. Tom Nichols, and the other officers, were re-elected unanimously for their splendid services of last year, and the membership is about to the closed. With more than 400 members already in the fold, it is anticipated only a few more applications will be accepted. Among the new members are somes plendid golfers, too.

Alcoma may well be pround of its layout when its present plans materialize . . . and they are well under way right now. Three new tees, terraced, will be found at No. 1, two at No. 2, two at No. 6, two at No. 8, a larger one on the lake hole, No. 16, and an enlarged one at No. 17. The fifth hole is being lengthened.

Utilizing the more than acre of Washington strain creeping bent in a hillside nursery, Alcoma plans on laying new greens on top of the present No. 2, No. 14 and No. 18 putting surfaces. Art Snyder, Alcoma's greenkeeper, has been experimenting with Washington strain on his course since Dave Bell found it such a complete success at St. Clair, and has found it to be just the thing. It would not be at all surprising if Alcoma eventually replaced its present greens, all 18 of them, with Washington strain turf. In putting the green on top of the present ones, it is hoped to give them an exceptionally fine base. Alcoma members are enthusiastic over the prospect.

HAS OWN WELLS

Harry Gray, chairman of Alcoma's publicity committee, tells us Alcoma now has two wells of its own, which will assist in watering the course as well as give members better drinking water.

Dr. W. H. K. McDiarmid, East Liberty dentist and champion at Alcoma, has been experimenting with the new larger and lighter ball. Whereas with the present smaller, heavier ball he gets a long, sky-high 300-yard drive, with the new one he receives a much lower ball, almost 15 yards short of his former driving capacity.

A large tournament schedule is being worked up by the golf committee, which includes S. L. Seeman, chairman; R. C. Boak, J. U. Euwer, Dr. H. T. Patton and F. R. Carruth. Earle Gosser is chairman of the house committee, which also includes T. E. Harvey, G. C. Schutte, A. G. Pera and George E. Stengle. S. N. Randolph is directing the green committee.

RUM RUNNERS IN BATTLE

EL PASO, Tex., April 8.—(INS)—Citizens of El Paso and the border patrol got a good laugh out of a real gun battle, when liquor smugglers working half a mile north of El Paso-Juarez international bridge got their signals mixed one night and fought among themselves for an hour while border patrolmen watched the battle from a nearby vantage point. There were no fatalities for either side.

Officers had arrested a Mexican boy and a Mexican woman, who had waded the Rio Grande with 50 gallons of liquor, when smuggler snipers stationed on the American side to protect the waders opened fire. Another band of snipers on the Mexican side, believing officers were firing on the boy and woman, answered the fire.

The battle which raged for about an hour could be heard in downtown El Paso. The allied snipers finally learned their fallacy and subsided.

Cold Tea Excellent Drink For Summer

For the midsummer afternoon tea it is pleasant to have everything green and cool — green glasses for cold tea, sprays of mint in the glasses, so that the spicy odor may be inhaled when the tea is sipped. Small sandwiches of cucumber, watercress or lettuce and cakes with mint frosting would add to the cool effect.

DANDRUFF Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silk hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon, apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

EXPOSITION HERE SHOWS PROGRESS MADE BY ELECTRICAL REFRIGERATION

9 DISTRIBUTORS SHOW LATEST MODELS

Two Weeks Exhibit Being Attended by Housewives; Working Models Set Up

Exemplifying progress of the electrical refrigeration industry in ice making machines for homes and institutions, the annual exhibit sponsored by the Electric League of Pittsburgh, at 933-935 Liberty avenue, presents an adequate idea of what is being accomplished by distributors in the local district, according to Ludwig Hommel, chairman.

Nined istributors are showing the latest models and the show will be open daily until April 19. The hours are from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. The exhibit is free.

HONSEWIVES ATTEND

Opening Saturday last, a steady stream of housewifes, business men, heads of institutions and home owners flocked through the display rooms from morning till night. Courteous salesmen and demonstrators explained the operation of each model.

Each display is stationed in an individual booth, gaily colored with gold and black crepe streamers which accentuate the gleaming white of the refrigerator models. Entertainment has been provided and lounge chairs and davenports located at various points for the comfort and convenience of visitors.

Actual working models of interior machinery of several machines have been set up.

ADVANTAGES SHOWN

Durability, ease of operation, economy, quietness, beauty, interior refinements and freedom from maintainence cost motivated manufacturers in 1930 models. Porcelain and sanitary white steel cases have been used. Many new features are incorporated. One outstanding development is the new hydrator, installed on Frigidaire machines. This innovation, according to company executives, does away with the old-fashioned inconvenience of wilted vegetables and edibles. These, placed in the hydrator, are freshened by the cool, moist air, and keep indefinitely.

Distributors and their models are:

LIST OF DISTRIBUTORS

I. W. Danforth, Inc., Westinghouse distributors—Three models, with 75, 55 and 100-foot refrigeration capacities. All machines are of enameled steel and porcelain construction, and introduce the apparatus of this company into the field. Models are for both large and small families.

Ochiltree Electric Company, General Electric distributors—Three steel and one porcelain models comprise this exhibit. Included are those for apartment houses and both large and small homes. All have latest improvements and feature silence in operation as well as economy of maintainence.

Kelvinator-Leonard Corporation, Kelvinator distributors: Intermediate, large and small refrigerators attract much comment in this display. Four models are on the floor, all of which are the last word in sanitary efficiency. Ice and refrigeration at constant temperatures are stressed.

Bailey-Farrell Manufacturing Company, Trupar distributors: Models for apartment houses, private homes and the larger plants for institutions show the progress made by Bailey Farrell in its contribution to housewife emancipation. Five machines are on display.

Suburban Electric Development Company, Frigidaire distributors: The Hydrator, guaranteeing fresh and crisp vegetables at all times, is the big selling point in the Frigidaire group. All models are porcelain lined. A demonstration machine, showing the workings of one of the plants, is a feature.

COMPLETE LINE SHOWN

Ludwig Hommel and Company, Norge distributors: Norge machines are divided into five sizes. These have rugged beauty and ease of operation, are the Sentinel, Defender, Guardian, Norge special and Norge commercial. Plants for both home and business installation are included.

Logan-Gregg Company, Copeland distributors—With interior refinements and silence paramount features the Copeland exhibit of seven large and small models, is attracting much favorable comment. Several innovations are features.

Ruthledge Sales Company, Ice-O-Matic distributors—The Ice-O-Matic exhibit contains a number of white and gleaming refrigerators adapted for private dwellings and apartment houses. Plants are manufactured both for small and large homes. Refrigeration capacity is adapted in proportion to the size of the family.

Valley Sales and Service Company, Universal distributors—There are five models in the Universal display, located near the left front of the show room. These, according to attaches, combine ease of operation, consistent performance, moderate cost and perfect control.

Dietary Control Reduces Diseases

Through better dietary control and increased knowledge of preventative methods applied to disease, tuberculosis, diphtheria, typhoid, influenza and pneumonia, which once exacted the greatest toll in human life, are being brought more under control each year, the chamber declares. Reduction of the tuberculosis mortality rate alone since 1900, means a saving to the nation of $2,000,000,000 a year, it is estimated.

RAIL HEAD SEES GOOD BUSINESS

The United States is recovering from its recent financial upset and normal conditions should be reached by mid-summer or early fall at the latest, Edward W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said today on a visit to Pittsburgh.

Beatty is making a one-day stop in this city on his way home to Montreal from the South. He said the trip has been purely a vacation and that he is stopping here to see acquaintances.

He said Canada also has been undergoing a period of business dullness due to the slow movement of wheat into export channels. Both this country and Canada have enormous amounts of surplus wheat, but he is hopeful that export shipments will start before the new crops are harvested.

The stock market crash is not likely to affect the tourist travel in Canada this summer, in Beatty's opinion.

Children at Play Start $100 Blaze

Children playing with matches caused a fire on the third floor of the three-story brick residence of P. C. Gillespie, 258 Melwood avenue, today, firemen reported. The blaze, confined to one room caused damage of $100, they asserted.

NEW UNIVERSAL IS UNIQUE

Latest origination of the Universal Refrigerator laboratories is unique in convenience and utility, simple in operation and a decided advantage as it allows more precious space for food with healthfully cooled water and greater convenience.

Constructed of glistening white porcelain, attractive and easy to clean as it is entirely removable. No effort to fill as trombone at top moves forward to receive water, and equally simple to draw water into glass, merely pull faucet down—when finished push faucet up. Gauge indicates amount of water in tank, or lack of it.

Other features which are standard equipment in the Universal line are:

Electric light lighting the entire cabinet interior. A Chiltray for chilling salads and desserts and a Vegetable Bin for storage of certain fruits and vegetables. Modern Chromium Plated Hardware enhance the beauty of these cabinets.

Valley Sales and Service Company, Wilkinsburg, are the local distributors for Universal.

KITCHEN VIEWS WANTED

What will be the general appearance of the average American kitchen 10 years from today?

The housewife who can answer this question may write her own salary in letters a foot high. A lot of outstanding businessmen want to know. Kitchen appliance manufacturers everywhere and a score of allied interests ranging from makers of floor covering to paint concerns ponder this problem and await the answer.

Without a doubt the kitchen has felt the cosmic urge to become beautiful. It is in a state of transition. What it is going to look like ten years from now, no one can tell.

Once spacious in its dimensions, with room to accommodate the entire family, this room has become compact and efficient and a citadel of sanitation. Built-in equipment has completely transformed its arrangements. And now comes the compelling hand of beauty to still further speed its transformation.

Draperies of enticing sheen bedeck its windows. Daylight permeates its uttermost recesses. Labor saving appliances are all about. Painted walls, growing flowers and perhaps a picture or two have made their appearance. In short the lowly kitchen is fast becoming the bright spot of the entire home.

Stove and cabinet makers have caught the trend and have redesigned their products to please the eye and adorn the niches they must fill. Now, the refrigerator manufacturer has joined in the task, presenting cabinets of beautiful lines and handsome, resplendent hardware.

Beauty has come to the kitchen. The old-fashioned work-shop has gone the way of the family almanac, the roller towel and grandfather's boot-jack.

Electricity Keeps Even Temperature

A well made and insulated refrigerator is capable of maintaining an average temperature under 50 degrees F.

But it must have plenty of ice. By this is meant that the ice chamber must be constantly more than half full of ice. It should be placed as far from the stove as possible, inside rather than on the back porch, and the doors should always be tightly closed except when food is actually being removed or placed in the box. Also, care should be taken that nothing warm finds its way inside.

GLASS COOLERS ATTRACTIVE

Refrigerator sets in glass add to the immaculate appearance of the ice box. Their transparency is attractive, and the covered containers obviate the possibility of odors.

Space-saving sets are made in either circular or square design. The latetr is composed of two large boxes placed one above the other, and two small ones which fit side by side on top of the larger box. The one lid serves for the whole set, as the containers are used one above the other. This set is made of clear glass. An arrangement of this type should encourage thrift in the household, as useful left-overs are often thrown away simply because of lack of space in the refrigerator.

Refrigeration Now All Year Round Need

Refrigeration, like home lighting, is an all-year-round need. Any housewife who keeps track of food spoilage in winter, which the use of properly controlled temperature would have prevented, can readily prove to herself the economy of its year-round operation.

ADMITS TRIPS, BLAMES GIRL

NEW YORK, April 8.—(INS.)—The odyssey of Nathan Leo Amster, 60-year-old married multimillionaire, and Olga Eide Edwards, dancing girl, which included junkets to California, Texas, Arizona and Europe—and finally ended in a courtroom—today was told from the witness stand by Amster at the trial of the girl on a charge of extortion.

Amster, under a withering cross-examination, admitted he and Olga were together in Los Angeles, Dallas, the Grand Canyon in Arizona, and that they took a trip through Europe. However, the traction magnate shouted from the stand that Miss Edwards had followed him to these places and that he had not invited here.

The dancer charges that Amster is the father of her 6-year-old son. He has denied this.

Dope Parole Broken, Man Gets Year Term

Judge Robert M. Gibson in Federal Court today revoked the parole of Frank Branch, Negro, 31, and sentenced him to one in Atlanta on a charge of selling dope. Branch had pleaded guilty to the sale of morphine on February 7 and had been placed on probation.

L. J. AFFELDER, ENGINEER, DIES

Heart disease caused the death today of Louis Jacob Affelder, 59, 5825 Bartlett street. He was a widely known philanthropist and engineer, a resident of Pittsburgh all his life, on governing boards of many charitable and civic institutions of this city.

Settlement work among the poor interested Mr. Affelder principally. At the time of his death he had been president of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement for 15 years. He was division contracting manager for the American Bridge Company, chairman of the building committee of the Irene Kaufmann Addition, recently opened; trustee of the Children's Service Bureau of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of Pittsburgh; of the Emma Farm Association; treasurer of the Rodef Shalom congregation; first vice president of the Public Health Nursing Association; treasurer of the National Federation of Settlements; chairman of the budget committee, Pittsburgh Welfare Fund, and vice chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Recreation Committee. He belonged to the Concordia Club and the Westmoreland Country Club.

Out of respect to Mr. Affelder's memory, the father and son dinner of Rodef Shalom congregation scheduled for Wednesday night has been postponed indefinitely.

Affelder was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and of the Western Pennsylvania Engineering Society. He was a graduate of Western University.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Estelle May Affelder; his mother, Mrs. Kate Fleishhman Affelder, three children, Mrs. Louise A. Davidove, Miss Katherin Affelder, Paul B. Affelder; a sister, Miss Minnie Affelder; four brothers, Oscar, Will, Harry and Morris Affelder.

SEALED IN STEEL

that even drowned in water it still runs on

Of the hundreds of thousands of owners not 1 has paid a cent for SERVICE

WHO would dare to put a refrigerator mechanism to such a test—to submerge it in water—and expect it to run?

Who would dare? Those same engineers who built a refrigerator mechanism so efficient, so utterly dependable that they could seal it up hermetically with a permanent oil supply—and know that it would run faithfully through the years without a thought or worry.

They submerged it in water—and it still ran on. Think of the significance of such a test to you! Dust, dirt, moisture, rust—that lead to breakdowns and repair bills—are powerless to halt the flawless operation of General Electric mechanism. For, in that small, round casing you see on top of every General Electric Refrigerator—the entire mechanism is barricaded with impregnable walls of steel hermetically sealed! Dust, dirt, moisture and rust can never get inside.

Here is a refrigerator that gives you all the recognized advantages of electric refrigeration—and a great deal more besides. A mechanism so efficient that your electric current bills are cut to but a few cents a day. An incredible quietness of operation the day you buy—and always. A freezing regulator that is accessible right at your finger-tips. A snow white porcelain-lined cabinet that will wear like steel—because it is all-steel. And the entire mechanism is permanently oiled, and hermetically sealed against trouble.

Come in and let us tell you about our surprisingly easy terms.

HOME ICE COOLERS NOW CONSIDERED AS NECESSARY TO MODERN HOME

SURVEY SHOWS REFRIGERATION PROGRESS

Exposition Head Outlines Advantages Of Device To Preserve Food Supplies

By LUDWIG HOMMEL,
Committee Chairman Electric Refrigeration Show.

The Refrigeration Show being held in Pittsburgh from April 5 to April 19, with more than $30,000 worth of leading makes of refrigerators offers the public an outstanding opportunity to learn of the remarkable advances that have been made in home ice coolers.

Ludwig Hommel

The electric refrigerator, the least exploited and yet, most urgently needed of home appliances, has at last come into its own. A survey of the show's comprehensive exhibit, emphasises the remarkable improvements that have been made in the past few years.

INCREASED EFFICIENCY

Increased efficiency, extreme quietness, and the last word in convenience are combined with great beauty of appearance and a quality of consideration which makes the modern electric refrigerator an object of outstanding value.

Notwithstanding all the advances and improvements, prices today are lower and more moderate than ever before, so that at last this important home accessory is available at a price all can afford.

The long life of these machines make the investment cost per year negligible. Most of the new ice plants require no special technical engineering for installation. Practically any layman can now place them in complete operation. They are easy to move about the home, or from one structure to another, and a host of minor improvements also, have made them extremely attractive to the housewife.

Among these are the so-called hydrators which keep vegetables and fruits moist and fresh without affecting the drier atmosphere in the ice chest in general, so necessary to proper refrigration. Temperature adjustments in all makes allow a wide range of control for quick freezing of ice or—moderate box temperature

THRONGS CROWD SHOW

The electric refrigerator now finds tremendous acceptance, promising to equal—or surpass—that of the electric washing machine, automobile and radio. The throngs crowding the Show exhibit here prove the universal and district wide public interest.

Architects and home builders offer testimony that their clients consider the modern home incomplete unless equipped with an up-to-date ice plant of this type. Women feel, to a great extent in many circles, that their own social standing is enhanced when they can point with pride to their beautiful electric refrigerator in the kitchen.

They like to show them off at bridge luncheons, teas, and other home events, and of course, they like to make these delicious frozen desserts and foods of all kinds that are so readily made with the assistance of the ice plant.

Care Of Food Necessary To Health

Why do so many men and women—children, too, for that matter—feel out of sorts so much of the time? Of course there are many causes, overwork, nervous exhaustion, lack of sufficient sleep, lack of exercise, overeating, eating the wrong food—all take their toll in reducing the general average of health and cutting down the maximum efficiency of the nation.

One of these contributing causes, scientists and health experts say, is the lack of proper care of food in the majority of American homes.

Town Has Turnips Of Record Size

TULARE, Cal., April 8.—(INS.)—When bigger turnips are raised, Tulare will raise them!

That is the thought aroused here by a display of three large turnips that are on exhibition in the Chamber of Commerce office.

The huge vegetables, grown on the city sewer farm southwest of town, range from five to eight pounds apiece in weight. Stalks measure from a foot to several feet in height.

Fatal Tradition Still Holds Good

SAN MARCOS, Tex., April 8.—(INS.)—For three generations of the family the enigma has held good that the eldest and youngest sons of the Netherland family meet death by accidental causes. It has proved true again with the death of Ewell Netherland, 19, who died from injuries received in an automobile accident. A year ago his eldest brother was electrocuted while working on a power line.

CARE OF MILK EMPHASIZED

Diets may come and diets may go, but upon one article of food and its value in the food scheme of humanity prectically everyone agrees. That favored food is milk. And because of its importance in the dietary scheme of things it has been the subject of much scientific investigation.

Recently the Bureau of Home Economics at Washington conducted a study to determine at what temperature milk can be best held in the household refrigerator. Their findings establish very definitely the fact that milk cannot be safely kept at too low a temperature—a temperature preferably of 45 degrees Fahrenheit, but certainly not above 50 degrees. It is especially important that milk which is held for more than 24 hours be kept well below 50 degrees, although it may be quite safely stored for that short period at exactly 50 degrees.

Another important factor in the care of milk is seeing to it that the milk is placed in the refrigerator as soon after delivery as possible. The tests showed that in many cases milk held for 1½ hours at room temperature (76 degrees), showed an advanced rate of bacterial increase equal to a 24-hour rate of increase at refrigeration temperature. They are a prolific bunch, those bacteria, and you just can't afford to give them any opportunity to get ahead.

EL PASO WARS ON TRAMPS

EL PASO, Tex., April 8.—(INS.)—Tramps, hitch hikers and professional moochers are out of luck now, for the Salvation Army headquarters where free lodging and food was handed out for the asking and which was located in a fashionable residence section, is no more.

The house had been closed by order of the city council because citizens protested that beggar characters attracted to the home would scatter throughout the neighborhood, creating a "back door" menace.

Mexico City Joins In Light Jubilee

Very much interested in the fiftieth anniversary of the invention of the electric light, citizens of Mexico City, Mexico, celebrated Light's Golden Jubilee in the National Theater of that city. Prominent in the celebration was an electric refrigerator display.

KEEP FOODS IN COLD STORAGE

Frozen and frosted foods are now being manufactured and offered for sale. Being an entirely new development much space is being devoted to the subject in the newspapers and trade journals of the food industry.

The Kelvinator Corporation has, in the cold storage compartment of the DeLuxe models of its new line of electric refrigerators for household use, the only storage space for the new frozen food products which is always below freezing temperatures and will keep such foods frozen for an indefinite period.

Kelvinator Corporation executives and engineers foresaw this new development months ago and provided for its coming by including in its DeLuxe models this compartment for the storage of frozen meats, game, fish and fowl; for the storage of frozen desserts or an extra supply of ice cubes, or for the making of a cake of ice up to approximately 10 pounds in weight.

The new Kelvinator line was announced at its distributor's convention early in October. Distribution has been accomplished. Production is proceeding with great rapidity to meet demands. In addition to the great number of Kelvinators installed in homes and apartments many of the largest models have been installed in stores of all kinds.

With this Cold Storage compartment owners of DeLuxe model Kelvinators find themselves in a particularly fortunate position. They may become patrons of the new frozen and frosted food products and find immediate storage for them in a compartment always below freezing that will keep these foods in exactly the same condition as when purchased and until they wish to use them.

The condition and quality of fresh meats is greatly improved by storage in the new compartment. This compartment is, of itself, a domestic freezer of perishable foods that may be kept for an indefinite period.

The introduction of this new feature into Kelvinator gave to the public what Kelvinator has called "balanced refrigeration," a refrigerator with four distinct temperatures, each doing a definite job, each temperature automatically controlled to keep different foods chilled properly, and each independent of the other.

There is the correct temperature in the food compartment, below fifty degrees for the ordinary protection of foods. Next there is a temperature just right for the normal production of ice cubes and the freezing of desserts. Third there is the super-fast freezing temperature produced by Iso-Thermic Tubes, another exclusive Kelvinator discovery, and further there is the Cold Storage Compartment, in which the temperature is always below freezing. This compartment in the DeLuxe models is located directly under the lowest ice cube tray. It is of ample dimensions and is equipped with a snugly fitting door with hinges to match the outside hardware. It is a special compartment for a special purpose—a new convenience that is more than ever needed now that frozen and frosted foods are coming into the market.

U. S. Navy Believes In Refrigeration

The U. S. Navy recently placed an order for $27,000 worth of electric refrigerating equipment with Frigidaire Corporation, a subsidiary of General Motors. This order is to cover requirements of the Navy for a period of 12 months. The first installation made under this contract was on the U. S. S. Texas, where three electrically cooled storage boxes were placed in operation. A considerable amount of electric refrigerating equipment is being used by the Coast Guard and on destroyers.

Food Keeps Only At Low Temperature

The importance of low temperatures in the preservation of food in the home is emphatically illustrated in a chart recently issued by the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This particular chart is one of a series of six which the bureau is circulating on the general subject of household refrigeration.

According to this chart the highest permissable temperature for foodstuffs in the home is 52 degrees.

PROPER CARE OF FOODS ACCENTUATED AT REFRIGERATION SHOW

HEALTHHEADS HERE SEE BENEFITS

Responsibility Of Home Maker Is To Ward Off Sickness From Family

Leaders of Pittsburgh's social, business and professional life, as well as others vitally interested in the food industry, are taking cognizance of the efforts made by the Electric League of Pittsburgh and distributors of electric refrigerators, in their annual show being held from April 5 to 19.

Their statements follow:

DR. JOHN M. CONOVER, medical director of Allegheny County: "One of the greatest responsibilities of the homemaker is to keep her family in good health. The preservation of foods is the most important aid in her efforts, and any safe preservative of foodstuffs gives her a considerable advantage. The home maker should safeguard the family health by refrigeration."

KEEP FOOD COVERED

MRS. JOHN S. SLOAN, past president Congress of Women's Clubs: "Uncovered dishes containing perishable foods left in ice boxes and refrigerators not maintained at proper temperatures, appears to me to be the chief thing to be guarded against. Carelessness in this matter undoubtedly causes many of the ills that are unknown where proper refrigeration has been installed."

MRS. CHARLES MORRIS JOHNSTON, Congress of Women's Clubs: "There is nothing more vital to the housewife and mother than the care of her family's health. This becomes a matter of prime importance when milk must be kept fresh and sweet for the baby's use. The only way to insure against bacteria and germs reaching the infant through its food is by proper refrigeration. Hospitals and nursing centers are emphazing this in their contacts with prospective mothers."

MRS. ENOCH RAUH, Director of Public Welfare: "Family health must be preserved at all costs. Any campaign or display which has as for its object the safeguarding of food and the protection of health deserves the support of mothers of this city who wish to give their children the advantage of real health."

REFRIGERATION BEST

CHEF JOHN HAUNIKA, Keystone Athletic Association: "There are many ways of preserving food, but artificial refrigeration is the best method to use in order to insure original taste and flavor. A temperature at 50 degrees or under should be maintained in the refrigerator at all times to keep food from spoiling and to make it more palatable."

HON. JAMES RAE, president Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce: "One of the best standards of judging the progress of a city or nation is the importance it places in a legal way on the subject of food preservation. In no other country in the world has so much been done to protect the public's health through safeguarding its food supply, as in the United States. Modern electric refrigeration has had much to do with stamping out disease epidemics."

COLDBEYOND CONTROL

Refrigeration means cooling and is one of the commonest of natural phenomena. Yet years ago, this process was beyond man's power to control. Nothing could be done about the weather. Meats "went bad" at a certain point; starches became sugars; milk did not always "spoil" right and make cheese and many other foods underwent chemical changes which were not desired.

And although, in the course of time, smoking or otherwise curing meats proved of value, and dehydration—the drying of foods—also was used long ago, yet the great bulk of nourishing commodities had to be used near the scene of their production very soon after they became first available, except in the realms of those powerful emperors and kings who could circumvent nature with prodigious wealth.

Ten Plead Guilty In Crawford County

MEADVILLE, Pa., April 8.—(AP.)—Ten persons pleaded guilty to various offenses before Judge O. Clarke Kent here and were sentenced. Four pleaded guilty to liquor law violations, three to forgery, two to breaking and entering and one to defrauding a boarding house keeper.

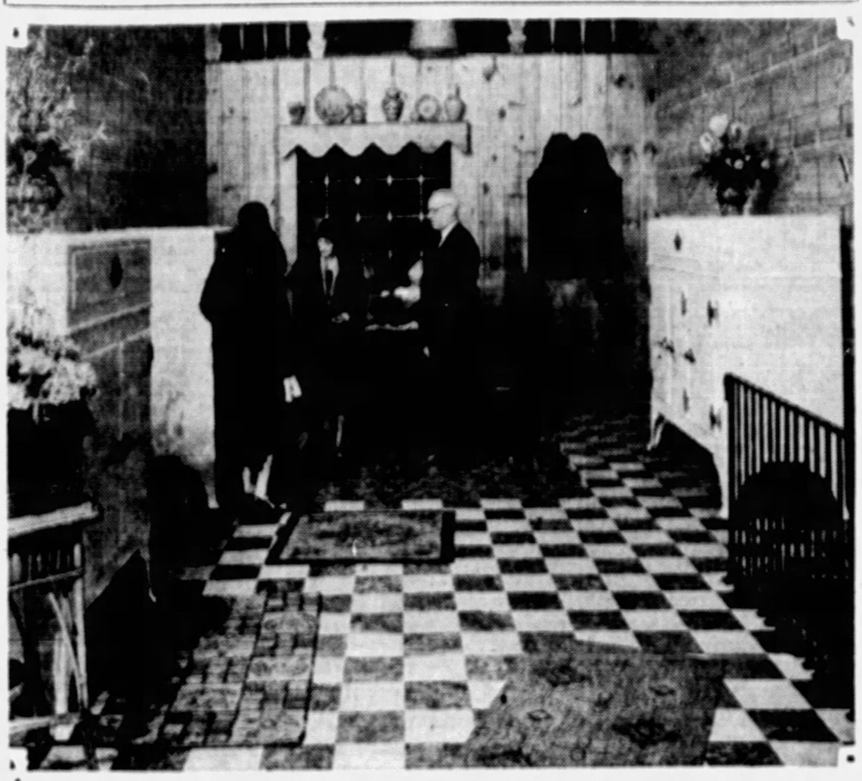
Vanport Man Hit By Truck, Injured

BEAVER, Pa., April 8.—Evy Batusic, 55, of Vanport, is in the Rochester Hospital with injuries about the body as a result of being run down by a truck, police report.

State Line Road Building Starts

SHARON, Pa., April 8.—Work has been started on the state line road, between Five Points and Orangeville. The cost of the construction will be divided between Pennsylvania and Ohio.

REFRIGERATORS SHOWN IN EAST END



DISPLAY ROOM WHERE WESTINGHOUSE REFRIGERATORS ARE SHOWN

The commodious display room of I. W. Danford, Inc., where the new Westinghouse refrigerators are being shown. The company also has a booth at 933-935 Liberty avenue where the show is being held from April 5 to 19. Three new models are demonstrated by a saleman.

MONKS FOUND COLD HEALTHY

For more than 900 years the monks of St. Augustine have fought their way through the bitter cold, over icy crags and through swirling snow, braving the terrific avalanches to find lost travelers seeking the haven of the hospice high in the Alps. During all of these years the monks have doled out food and warmth, a cheery mug of red wine and a bed to any wayfarer that came to their door.

Modern methods and equipment are now being used in this life saving task.

The kitchen is complete with modern equipment, range and serving tables. The need for this is readily understood when it is pointed out that during the summer months as many as 500 travelers may visit the hospice in one day. For centuries the wine was kept in deep cellars to keep it from freezing. In the cold months it was impossible to keep fresh meats and dairy products with the temperature far below zero. Today a modern mechanical refrigerator holds all this fresh food for long periods and the monks are able to live comfortably and eat well.

Baby Badly Hurt By Police Patrol

AMBRIDGE, Pa., April 8.—Lucille, 2, daughter of Walter Graham, of Ambridge, is in the Sewickley Hospital with a fractured skull and bruises about the head and body. The child was struck by the police patrol driven by Patrolman Isaac Jones.

Hand That Rocks Cradle Wields Influence

The hand that rocks the cradle influences the destiny of many a manufacturer. At least the destiny of those manufacturers who are engaged in making articles either for use in the home or for the family's personal use.

Women are the building power in the purchase of 95 per cent of the furniture and musical instruments sold in America, 83 per cent of the clothing for the family, 61 per cent of haberdashery for men and 90 per cent of the automobiles. It is estimated that 84 per cent of the women who drive the family car have the final word in deciding even the kind of gasoline the car should have.

SEES PICTURES REPLACE BOOKS

FORT WORTH, Tex., April 8.—(INS.)—With color, close-ups and speech injected into film records, it is the prediction made by Harry Fell, of Rochester, N. Y., that no more school books for children in the lower grades of study will be needed. He gave his views on visual education in the opening session of the Southwestern Professional Photographers' Association.

Because sensations brought to the brain in moving pictures impress themselves more easily and quickly, primary grade classes are using films more and more and instruction books are gradually being abandoned, he said.

FEDERAL DIET REPORT

United States government dietitians point out that a diet must not only be well balanced, but must consist of food that has been properly protected from its source to the table. Findings of dietitians of the United States Department of Agriculture indicate that milk, fresh meat, poultry, fish, fresh fruits, vegetables and other perishable foodstuffs must be kept at a temperature lower than 50 degrees in order to prevent the growth of bacteria and other micro-organisms which are responsible for many preventable diseases.

MURDER VICTIM MISSING HEIR

GREENVILLE, Tex., April 8.—(INS.)—The final chapter in the life of Arthur Benjamin, aged recluse, who died as mysteriously as he lived, has been written when it was undoubtedly established that he was the long sought heir of a large estate in Great Falls, Mont.

Benjamin, who lived the life of a huckster in Greenville and made his residence in a dilapidated shanty near the railroad tracks, died six years ago after being beaten to unconsciousness by unknown assailants. Efforts to identify his relatives or to solve the murder was an untiring problem of local authorities for months. His body was viewed by thousands and was finally buried after six months with no tangible clue to Benjamin's identity.

With the arrival here of W. H. Warren, of Montana, the case was reopened. He was seeking a brother-in-law by the name of the murdered man to inform him that he had inherited a large estate.

Benjamin's body was exhumed and body marks tallied with those given by Warren for identification.

Dead Czar May Be Proclaimed Saint

BERLIN, April 8.—(INS.)—A proposal to proclaim the late Czar of Russia, Nicholas II, a saint of the Serbian Church, is being considered by the Serbian Orthodox Church, according to dispatches from Belgrade.

The proposal comes from Leskovatz, a provincial town in Jugoslavia, where a special series of church services and meetings was held in his memory.

Meats Productive Bacteria Field

Low temperature is advised for uncooked meats, poultry and salad material held in a covered jar. Such supplies should be kept at a temperature not higher than 47 degrees, the charts indicate.

On account of the favorable field they afford for bacterial growth, milk, broth and dishes largely composed of milk should be kept at a temperature not above 45 degrees, according to the chart.

CITY BECOMES "REFRIGERATOR-CONSCIOUS"

HOME COOLERS BECOME FAD HERE

Sales Soon Expected To Surpass That Of All Electric Appliances

By GERARD H. NICKERSON,
Manager Electric Refrigeration Show.

As year after year rolls on, electrical refrigeration is becoming a more and more important factor in the home life of Pittsburgh's housewives.

A few years ago this type of cooling system was only in use in scattered sections, but today it is as common as the radio, the vacuum cleaner and the electric washer.

G. H. Nickerson

I venture to say that within the next few years or so, the sales of electric refrigerators of all makes will exceed those of many other forms of popular electric equipment.

SHOW COSTS $30,000

The refrigerator show sponsored by the members of the Electric League of Pittsburgh, is in itself a living example of what the desire

Doctoring Ice Box Regular Routine

Doctoring the family refrigerator is fast becoming a part of the domestic routine among wise housewives as a precaution against food spoilage and extravagance of operation. To determine whether the proper conditions are being maintained a thermometer is placed in the bottom of the refrigerator under the ice chamber, on the floor of the large food chamber and at the top of the large food chamber.

industry has accomplished within a comparatively short time. Nine distributors are represented, with an estimated outlay of more than $30,000.

Each and every model of ice making machine is displayed on the floor of the show quarters. All types, from those used in private homes to the larger models for hospital, hotel, store and institutional establishments, can be seen.

Pittsburgh distributors are busy at work making Pittsburgh "refrigerator-conscious." That they have succeeded in doing so to a great extent is manifest by the large attendance at the opening days of the show. Visitors were present from points from all over Allegheny County.

SPECIAL PROGRAMS

All models are the last word in efficiency, silence of operation, beauty and economy. The range of prices is in keeping with the low prices resulting from efficiency in factory operations and in mass production.

Special radio entertainment is provided for those who attend the show. Courteous and affable attendants at the various booths are adequately prepared to explain every working of each machine on the floor to those who so desire.

JULY 4 REALLY SEPT. 3

CHICAGO, April 8 — (INS.) — The idea of a new Independence Day to supplant July 4 is contained in a suggestion made here by J. Henry Smythe, Jr., of New York, in connection with Chicago's Century of Progress celebration to be held here in 1933.

In an interview at the Hamilton Club in this city, Smythe, who established Franklin Day in honor of Benjamin Franklin, suggested that the forthcoming celebration serve also to mark the one hundred fiftieth anniversary of the independence of the United States.

For, Smythe points out, although the Declaration of Independence was signed on July 4, 1776, it was not until September 3, 1783, that the treaty of peace with Great Britain in which that country recognized the United States as an independent nation, was signed.

"That date," he said, referring to September 3, 1783, "might be as important today in our history as July 4, or perhaps more so, if it had received the proper backing at the start. It just happened that July 4, the day of signing the Declaration of Independence, was selected as the day for celebrating our independence instead of September 3, which is just as logical a day from the standpoint of historical significance."

Smythe has coined more than 1,000 successful patriotic and political slogans and was a leader in the fight in the Methodist Church to lift the church's ban on amusements.

Smallest Lunch Room Has Cooler

The Quality Lunch No. 1 at Colorado Springs, Col., is probably the smallest lunch room in the world. It is equipped with electrical refrigeration, the installation including one cabinet, coil water cooler and compressor. The Quality does a steady business nearly all day and night and accommodates only six customers at a time. This installation proved so worth-while that the owner has installed like equipment in his larger lunch room known as Quality No. 2.

A home of your own is a dream realized. The Classified Ads can help you locate the ideal home.

MIDDLE CLASS BUYS HEAVILY

People of moderate means are the heaviest purchasers of electric refrigerators for the home, according to a recent survey. A study of more than 11,000 sales on the extended payment basis, made in all parts of the country shows that more than one-third of these users reported incomes of $2,500 a year or less and that considerably more than half had incomes of not more than $3,000 a year.

This is in striking contrast with the sales of two years ago when only one-third of this company's time payment business came from people with incomes of $3,000 a year or less.

DAILY TRUE STORY

In Ten Lessons

"ELEVEN-FORTY," muttered Vera Cummings.

She wasn't speaking of time, as divided into hours and minutes; she was referring to finance, as divided into dollars and cents.

Her finances—her entire fortune, aside from a few pretty dresses she had bought before Geltman & Geltman, novelty wholesalers, had sold out, was "Eleven-forty."

Vera had been bookkeeper for the firm for three years. She was clever at that work, but the people who bought out the old firm evidently had a flock of relatives. The relatives got the jobs.

It was a bad time for losing a job.

It was a bad time in the novelty business, too. Right after the big financial crash and people were scratching around for a few necessities regardless of novelties.

Bookkeepers were evidently a drug on the employment market.

Vera had read the classified help-wanted advertisements until she dreamed of rows of them.

She tucked the eleven-forty currency back into her handbag and stared out at the weatherstained brick rear walls and narrow dirty back yards and laden clotheslines.

"Four dollars tomorrow on the room stakes me to a bed and roof for another week," she was thinking, "and that leaves six-forty for eats. Make that do a week——"

Vera Cummings closed her pretty lips tightly and stared at the strip of murky sky over the roof-tops.

She couldn't answer the question, "What then?" She didn't know the answer.

Vera had been self-supporting since she was 16. She had been alone, save for some relatives up in Canada as poor as herself, for several years.

Ann, the rooming-house slavey, called to her. She went down to the telephone. It was Merton Rogers.

"How about some eats and a picture?" he asked.

Likes Roger

"Lovely," she agreed, thinking, "price of one meal saved."

Merton Rogers seemed to be fond of Vera. She liked him well enough, he was decent, steady and all that. Just as soon as he got to be foreman of the shipping room, he said, they could afford to get married. Vera thought of this as she got into her prettiest dress. Too bad he wasn't foreman then—her problem would be solved, might as well marry him as anyone.

Merton took her to a little place where the prices were reasonable and one could dance. Merton liked to think that he could dance well—Vera wished that he could. Vera danced because she couldn't help it—she loved it.

Merton was rather glum.

"Boss put a chap in the shipping room today, relative of his wife's. Guess I'll have to get me a new job, he's sure to make the new chap the foreman soon as he learns the ropes—they all do—that means we'll have to postpone getting spliced, Vera, for a year or two."

"Too bad," Vera said, thinking, "A year or two—and I've only got enough coin to last me a week!"

Merton was nodding to some one.

"Wish I had his coin; he's my boss' brother and owns the Tulip Gardens, if you please," Merton explained.

"Gee!" said Vera.

The Tulip Gardens was a mint—one of three big dance places where they supply girls for partners, "taxi dancers," they are called, and also have teachers and give lessons.

The man came over and Merton introduced him, Mr. Mertz. He asked Vera to dance. To her surprise the big man was a wonderful dancer.

"You can't fool me, Miss Cummings," he said. "You are a professional dancer."

"Thanks, only I'm a bookkeeper."

"Yeah? You could make twice as much at dancing. Teaching would be your line—I know, I'm——"

"I know, Mr. Mertz. Swell place. I've been up there."

"Well, if you ever want to quit keepin' books, come and see me—give you a good job."

Accepts Job

"Taxi dancing? With every Tom, Dick and Harry——"

"No, not that, put you in my school, start you with 35. I know dancers and——"

"If you mean that, Mr. Mertz, I'm no longer a bookkeeper, I'm a dancing instructress."

Vera was too wise to tell him she was out of a job—he might try to pay her less.

Vera told Merton.

"Well, for cat's sake, you wouldn't do that, would you?" he exclaimed.

"There are things worse; I've got to eat, Merton."

"You'll get yourself a good job; don't do that—I wouldn't be very proud to have to say my wife used to be a dance-hall girl!"

"You won't have to do that," she said.

"Atta girl!"

Merton, the sap, thought Vera meant that she wouldn't take the job. He was too dumb to see that she meant she wouldn't ever be his wife if he felt that way.

Vera got the job.

Mertz was mighty decent to her. Probably a lot of the girls did date up the boys and meet them after the place closed, but that was strictly up to them. Vera did her one to six and seven to midnight teaching. Some of the boobs were terrible to dance with, but most of them were pretty decent. Now and then Vera would stop dancing and say, "You're in the wrong place."

To give Mertz credit he approved of this and the offenders were promptly ejected.

One afternoon a tall square-shouldered young chap with a tanned face and deep blue eyes was introduced to Vera by Mrs. Mertz who often supervised that part of the business.

Mr. Ashley Mass Cummings."

Vera bowed. "What a hick!" she was thinking.

"I don't know a thing about dancing and they told me here that they could teach me in 10 lessons," he said.

"Certainly," murmured Vera, glancing down at his shoes.

"Shoes too heavy?" he asked.

"Might be lighter, but we'll try," Vera told him.

The next afternoon his shoes were lighter. He did a little better.

"Didn't get much chance in the engineering school to dance," he explained on the third afternoon, "then I was sent on a job down to South America, gone four years, just got home."

Sister to Be Married

"You won't be a wonder, but you will be able to get around pretty well in 10 lessons," Vera told him.

"I'd take 20 or 40 if I had time. Fact is, my kid sister I've been putting through college wants me to come up to the class day stuff and I want to dance a little, don't want her to be ashamed of me."

"Where do you live?" Vera asked.

"Little town in Ohio. Sis lives there. I gave her my share of the house, we're alone. She's going to be married right after she graduates—say, seems to me there's a lot of work in dancing."

"Perhaps it depends on whom you dance with."

"Well, I couldn't dance with anyone prettier or lighter or—or nicer."

"How quick you pick up a line when you get back to civilization," Vera said.

"You mean you think I'm just kidding you? Well, I'm not, say, honestly, will I be able to dance with anyone after 10 lessons?"

"No, but with good dancers you'll get along. I'll make a dancer of you in 10 lessons, we have to live up to our agreement."

The next day Vera thought she saw Merton Rogers peering into the room. It was Saturday. He would be off. She hadn't seen him since she took the job.

"Look here," Tom Ashley said, "I came on from home in my car, would you be afraid to go somewhere with me tomorrow, some roadhouse where they dance Sundays and see how I get along in a regular dance crowd?"

"No, I wouldn't be afraid. I'd be delighted," Vera assured him.

He called for her. She was pleasantly surprised. His car was a good one. He brought along a picture of the little cottage home in Ohio and of his sister, a pretty girl who looked like him.

After Sis gets married I'm going out in Oregon on a dam job," he said.

"As bad a job as that?"

Tom Ashley roared with laughter. Vera loved the way his deep blue eyes twinkled and the jolly little wrinkles at the corners when he laughed.

Merton Angry

"Building a dam," he managed to explain.

"Oh, what a sap I am!"

"Gosh, you are prettier than ever when you blush. Say, I wish I could have time for 20 or 40 lessons."

It was dark when they got back and he took her to the shabby place where Vera roomed. He helped her out. Some man got up from the steps and came to her.

"Hey," he said, "you lied to me—you said you wouldn't take that dance-hall job and here you are dating up those low-down bums who——"

"Be your temperature, Merton!" Vera snapped, terribly embarrassed.

Merton grabbed her arm.

"Listen, Vera, cut out that job; I won't stand for it——"

Vera tried to back away and he held her tighter.

"Quit, you hurt my——"

Tom Ashley stepped in. He twisted Merton's wrist, he pushed the flat of his hand against Merton's jaw and Merton sat down so suddenly that he saw stars.

"Your friend forgot himself," Ashley said.

"No friend of mine, honestly, I was mistaken in him——"

Merton leaped at Ashley then, and Ashley socked him prettily.

"Oh, Tom, you are wonderful!" Vera whispered.

He took her up to the door and into the hall.

"See you tomorrow—Vera!"

Suddenly he kissed her.

"Don't be mad," he pleaded.

"I would have been if you hadn't kissed me, Tom!"

Next day was the tenth lesson.

"Vera," he said, "I've learned how to dance in 10 lessons and I've learned more. I've learned how to propose—will you marry me?"

"Yes, Tom, because I've learned to love you—in 10 lessons!"

William Fitzgerald, a lawyer of New Brunswick, N. J., has invented a tube to be attached to front bumpers of automobiles—when jarred it ejects 25 paper disks, each bearing the license number and name of the owner.

This will do away with the inconvenience of stopping to revive the quarry before giving him your card.

However, lest the procedure become too formal, it might be well to add a personal touch by having some little motto printed on your cards, such as:

"Where did you learn to walk?"

"Good thing I wasn't in any more of a hurry."

"It's a small world after all!"

And for more aesthetic motorists the card device might even be improved, so as to distribute lilies.

Our Gallery of Beautiful Women

Note—Yesterday we appealed to the women of America—or, that is, we asked that they send in their photographs, to be placed in our Memory Book. The women responded as one man to this request. Our idea, already explained, is to place these albums on park benches among the unemployed, so they can have something else to think about besides the material things of this world.

TODAY'S selection for our Gallery of Beautiful Women is a lady from Omaha, who states that she is unmarried and will make somebody a dandy wife. "Who that lucky person will be," she writes, "is quite a story. I will not take time to list the many reasons for my being lonesome, except to state that they are basically sound." She is just rounding forty, and has her own motorcycle and municipal auto camp. She plans to tour the national parks if she can find the right man. Although the little lady prefers to withhold her name, she asks that interested parties address her in care of General Delivery, Omaha.

National Defense Forces Inexcusably Neglected

Against the Republican administration and the Republican Congress now in power, the American people have a grievance that they should press without delay.

That grievance is the indefensible neglect by the Republican administration and the Republican Congress now in power of the national defense of sea, land and air.

Instead of going ahead with the building of the cruisers authorized by the last Congress, the leaders of the Republican party at both ends of Pennsylvania avenue are holding back this new construction upon the flimsiest of excuses.

Yet the Navy is sorely in need of the cruisers to balance the fleet, and to perform the peace time tasks of the Navy. And thousands of men are in need of the employment which this construction program would quickly provide.

Instead of speeding up the housing program for the Army and providing decent quarters for the officers and enlisted men, this new construction is moving forward so slowly that many years must elapse before the Army of the wealthiest nation in the world will be properly housed.

And all the while thousands of men are urgently in need of the employment which the speeding up of this construction program would quickly provide.

Instead of dealing justly with the air force of the Army by giving its pilots the promotion that is due them, the Congress continues to dilly-dally with the whole Army promotion problem.

Instead of giving to the Army and Navy and air forces that increase in pay which they ought to have had years ago, the Republican Congress is perpetuating the injustices of existing pay tables. And the Republican administration is showing no initiative in impressing the Congress with the urgency of righting this wrong to our defenders with the colors.

The truth is that the itch of the Republican party to serve special privilege at home and to pose as a Meddlesome-Matty abroad is only equaled by its neglect of the national defense afield and afloat and its callous indifference to our defenders with the colors on land and sea and in the air.

Against the danger and the disgrace of this neglect and this indifference the American people owe it to themselves to protest not only to their President and to their Senators and Representatives in Congress now but by their votes when they go to the polls next November to elect a new Congress.

For a Republican administration and a Republican Congress that has squandered the first year of its power by catering to organized minorities scheming to undermine the national defense and involve the United States in political entanglements abroad, deserve that rebuke at the polls which only the American people can give.

Home Building Program Will Promote Prosperity

Now is the time, while labor is plentiful and the cost of construction materials moderate, for the American people to launch a countrywide program of home betterment and home building.

Not only the governors and legislatures of the several states, but municipal authorities and bankers and business men the country over can quicken the rate of returning prosperity by cultivating the vast field of residential building and improvements.

Better facilities to finance home building and home improvements are needed everywhere.

How best to supply this need is a question that is now engaging the attention of the National Building Survey Conference.

And it is a question to which the leaders of every progressive community in the land ought to strive to find an answer as soon as possible.

Statistics show that residential building contracts last year fell below any of the preceding four years. For the current year they ought to show a marked increase. And they will if the leaders of every community co-operate to that end.

No better investment can be made by the American people this year, no stronger safeguard to American citizenship established, no greater stimulus given the American spirit than to multiply North, East, South and West the number of American families whose earnings are going into the building and betterment of American homes.

To the seven thousand millions of dollars that the wealthiest nation in the world will expend this year in the construction and maintenance of public works and public utilities, a wise nation will add a few thousand millions of dollars to the amount spent in home building and home betterment. Honest government and sound banking should promote such a program.

Home building and home betterment on a national scale now will promote American prosperity, increase the standard of American living, add to the sum of American happiness, and quicken the American spirit throughout the household of the nation.

For the American home is the cradle of American character. And American character, as George Washington said to Patrick Henry, is "the cement which binds the Union."

New Attack

Economic Argument Against Long Skirts.

A few forlorn women have tried to organize against long skirts.

They have failed to rouse their indifferent sisters with the arguments that—

1. Short skirts are hygienic.
2. Short skirts permit freedom of movement.

But now comes the newly organized "Sensible Dress Society" of Liverpool, England, with an economic argument which may change opinion at its source.

The Liverpool ladies appeal direct to the cloth and silk trade. Their argument is that long dresses do not help business, because the modern woman can afford two short dresses as against one long dress.

Perhaps an economic argument will accomplish something at the next secret fashion caucus—because economic arguments win in this world when higher logic fails.

Long Count May Save Champ -:-

Drawn by Nelson Harding

One battler in this freakish bout
Has long been lying down and out;
But Time has counted months that passed,
And signs of life appear at last.

Though fans lost interest long ago,
The count has been so long that, lo,
The drowsy dreamer wakes and may
By one last rally save the day.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

It Doesn't Make Census

SOME of the questions you will be asked by the census grabber:

"Bugs" Baer

Name, if any? Are you related to your family? How old do you think you should be under favorable circumstances? Can you read or write, or both?

If you are married what is your native language when you are listening? If you are a gainful worker, who's got your job?

Who supports you since you decided that you knew more than your old man?

Is there a radio set in your home? Is there a stopper in your bathtub or do you use your big toe?

Did you vote wet or dry in the poll of the Literary Digest? And what of it?

Is your husband's insurance made out in your name or do you love him?

At the time you were born what was your business? If Cal Coolidge is no longer President why doesn't he pull in his neck?

Were you in the Army during the war or did you know a Congressman?

Did you ever have an easy chair that lasted longer than the installments?

What was your sex on your last birthday? Color? married, single, divorced, optimistic or do you live on a farm?

Were you actually at work yesterday or do you belong to so many benefit lodges that you bruise very easily?

Do you save string? Did a revenue agent ever strike oil in your cellar?

Are you a veteran of the Army or the Navy or did you run between them? How many times did you vote before you learned to read and write? Who is the Vice President of the United States and what has become of him?

Can you see America and watch a taximeter without getting cross-eyed? Who talked you out of taking your paper profits?

Who is your nearest living relative when you are making home brew? What do you do with your knees in a rumble seat?

If you studied music who earns your living?

Will the Einstein theory stop a run in a stocking?

These are but a few of the most important questions in the census. You must fill them all out. But that doesn't mean anything because the Census Bureau is liable to turn down your application.

SOME WEEK-END!

By Herbert Kaufman

IF King Solomon was in touch with any spiritualistic medium toward the end of last week, delicacy forbade her to remind him that the WISEST of men are apt to play the FOOL when they undertake to fix BOUNDARIES for possibility.

It would take a hundred volume encyclopedia to inform that DEFLATED sage of ALL the new things under the sun, since HE last squinted at it.

The death of Empress Judith of Abyssinia would interest him LEAST of recent happenings.

The husband of a thousand wives, however exceptional his memory, could hardly be expected to keep track of descendants whose complete inventory would require a bigger census organization than the staff now tallying our hundred and twenty million-odd population.

NOBODY can be SURE how many of his corpuscles derive from royal veins. A score of Sheba's, Xerxes' or Tamerlane's collaterals have rubbed elbows with every one of us. Conquest, revolution and dethronement increasingly reduce dynastic groups to the herd, from which they rose.

The successors of Queen Victoria of Sweden, whose funeral cortege will soon pass through the news-reel camera, are already counted.

Radio and celluloid hair snatched the pen from history's fingers and put a crank-handle there. Jersey City announces the establishment of the first television theater. What a program it could present if Baird's amazing invention were FULLY perfected.

Sound and vision waves would be delivering Ghandi's final defiance of British authority to the entire universe. And on the magic screen, soon to become the common stage of all events, Poly-Glot audiences might WATCH and HEAR Afghan cannons execute sentence upon the rebels strapped to their muzzles.

JOHN BULL introduced the NEAT trick during the Indian mutiny. And that same busy colony collector faces another mutiny TODAY—an ECONOMIC mutiny against which he dare use nothing beyond persuasion.

Australia, deserting the standard of imperial free trade, erects, in the opinion of London, "the highest tariff barrier in the world." Wait until they read the final Smoot-Hawley schedules—WHEN and AS decided, of course. Which will probably be next year at the PRESENT rate of conference action. But doubtless BEFORE the naval parley makes up its mind on ANYTHING.

If Mr. Stimson's delay-linger-and-waiters don't hurry, that OTHER chronic slow-poke, the Muscle Shoals act, is likely to become operative before his group CUTS BAIT OR FISHES.

But don't count chickens before they're HATCHED, just because the Senate and House have separately confirmed a measure to set Uncle Sam up in the power and nitrate business.

QUIBBLE, wrangle and scandal must still have THEIR say—and PLENTY of it.

But you'll note that no time was lost in appropriating requested amounts for prohibition enforcement. When Dr. Wilson and Bishop Cannon have whips to crack and axes to grind, Capitol clocks ALWAYS QUICK-STEP.

And the surprise of the nation, both Houses, for once, ALSO respond to POPULAR insistence and John Hancock the President's call for emergency funds to inaugurate the vastest public works EVER conceived by government.

Mr. Hoover's fountain pen becomes a baton, leading prosperity across the continent, as it summons 125,000 men from the ranks of idleness to begin laying roads in 48 states.

A few MORE such constructive gestures, and there won't be a bear left in the stock market.

∴ LISTEN, WORLD ∴

By Elsie Robinson

THERE'S a dreadful scene in the play "The Criminal Code." From your pleasant, cushioned seat in the orchestra, you look into that tomb of the living dead—the penitentiary. Gray walls—gray air—gray flesh, that once was bright with hope—and a Gray Sound that is at first tiresome but presently grows monstrous—maddening!

THUD—THUD—THUD . . . over and over . . . THUD—THUD—THUD. A grim and hopeless sound—hopeless as the sound of clods falling on a coffin—the sound of the jute mill, falling on dead hearts. Ask a convict what he dreads most during his "rap" and he'll tell you, without hesitation—the jute mill. There's something about it—that rasping routine, that merciless monotony—that pounds the manhood out of the desperate wretches that serve it. Under that THUD—THUD—THUD—hope shatters and pride ravels into bloody strings.

Men can stand hard labor, abuse, danger and strain, but they cannot, for long, endure monotony. Life was not meant to be a tread mill. It was meant to be an adventure. A dangerous, painful adventure, perhaps, but with a challenge and a chance, and always a new turning to the trail.

Our heads are not shaved, we do not wear stripes, but we too serve in a jute mill and slowly go mad, under its monotony. THUD—THUD—THUD . . . that becomes the dreadful tempo of our lives. The same old jobs, the same old thoughts, the same old problems, day after day.

And yet—we could be free, if we wanted to be. No matter how poor we are, no matter how handicaped, no matter how ignorant, life may be an adventure. IF WE'LL HAVE IT SO.

There's a one-armed flower vender, at a corner of Grant ave., in San Francisco, who gives you romance, with a 10-cent bunch of violets.

There's a blind beauty operator in Sonora, who lives rainbows.

Life's an adventure to them because they make it so. But for thousands of others, it's a jute mill. We, too, could, have adventure—but we don't want to take a chance or pay the price. Always some shackle binds us—shackles of fear, or laziness, or self-pity, or habit, or sentimentality, or self indulgence.

Text For Today

For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.—Romans i:16.

(The text for today is suggested by the Rev. J. Alvin Orr, pastor, First United Presbyterian Church, North Side.)

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

ONCE more, if all insects are blood relations, with bodies basically similar but specialized in divers ways to suit their diverse habits, the common plan of their jaw parts is easy to understand. If they are all separate creations, then only the supposition of a sort of monstrous pedantry in creation seems to afford a glimmer of elucidation.

Examples could be multiplied almost ad infinitum—the appendages of lobsters, crabs, and other crustaceans; the teeth of mammals; the skull or the brain through the whole vertebrate series—all tell the same story.

H. G. Wells

A handful of different flowers gathered in a country walk would suffice for demonstration, if looked at searchingly with the eye that can pierce below the surface; for, as T. H. Huxley wrote:

"Flowers are the primers of the morphologist; those who run may read in them uniformity of type amidst endless diversity of plan with complex multiplicity of detail.

"As a musician might say, every natural group of flowering plants is a sort of visible fugue, wandering about a central theme, which is never forsaken, however it may, momentarily, cease to be apparent."

Only descent seems able to explain that unity.

Of recent years fresh support for the evolutionary idea has been forthcoming from a new quarter in the proof of the chemical resemblances and differences between animals and plants. This is really evidence of the same kind which we have just been examining, save that the witness speaks a different language.

The evidence still concerns resemblances in construction, but they are the invisible resemblances of chemical structure instead of the visible ones of anatomy.

Let us be a little more explicit about this new line of evidence.

Many of the triumphs of modern medicine, as the reader probably knows, such as the antitoxin treatment of diphtheria, or preventive inoculation against typhoid and para-typhoid fevers, are based upon the fundamental principle that when any foreign substance belonging to the chemical group of proteins gets into the circulation the body manufactures an "antibody"—a substance which in some way neutralizes the foreign protein or puts it out of action, and the antibody acts with full force only against the particular protein introduced, with less force against proteins of similar chemical structure, and not at all against the rest.

Now one of the chief ways in which the foreign protein may be put out of action is by precipitating it in solid form.

If for example a rabbit be poisoned by a few injections of horse's blood it produces an antibody which gives its own blood the power of precipitating the blood of horses.

If measured quantities of the bloods of treated rabbit and of a horse be mixed in a test-tube, a cloud appears and settles to the bottom—the horse-proteins have been eliminated.

If, however, the same amount of the treated rabbit's blood had been mixed with blood from a hen, there would have been no precipitate, not even a trace of cloudiness. The rabbit antibody which was efficacious with horse proteins would be totally ineffective with hen proteins.

But if it had been mixed with donkey's blood there would have been a precipitate—only not quite so much as if horse's blood had been used; while cow's or sheep's blood would have given a definite, but very much smaller precipitate.

It is obvious from general structure considerations that a donkey is more nearly related to a horse than a cow, or a cow than a hen.

Here we find that this relationship extends to the chemistry of the proteins. In brief, after animal X (a rabbit is generally used for this purpose) has been treated with the blood of a second kind of animal A, then the amount of precipitate which its blood gives with the blood of A and of other kinds of animals, B, C, D, is found to be proportional so to speak, to the closeness of relationship of these latter to A, as measured by anatomical likeness.

A great amount of work has been done on this subject, much of it summarized in Nuttall's, and it is of great technical interest.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 8.—It was in the office of a bachelor worldling into which I had dropped for a brief chat. He is a mixture of a Good Time Charlie and a hard-hearted executive—the type that plays when he plays and works when he works.

His secretary announced a visitor and at his acquiescent nod I arose to go. "Wait a minute," he insisted. There swept into the room a gorgeously gowned lady with kalsomined cheeks and an Ethel Barrymore tilt to her head. She greeted him effusively and glanced at me hesitatingly.

She had come to see him on a very personal mission and again looked at me. "This," said the gentleman in mock gravity bowing toward me, "is my attorney. I have no secrets whatever from him. Feel perfectly free to discuss whatever is on your mind."

It developed the lady was of the musical stage, a show girl, and had reached an impasse in her financial affairs. Her "income" had suddenly stopped, the show was closing, and she found herself deeply in debt with a possible eviction from her apartment in the offing.

"Unless I raise $300 by 11 o'clock," she said, "I will be out on the streets with everything I possess attached." The bachelor had nodded sympathetically until the mention of $300, and then there was a glint—a glint of clear ice—in his eyes.

"If you have to raise $300 by 11 o'clock," he said, "it will be ungallant of me to detain you. You have only a very few moments left." And he arose as a very certain indication the interview had come to a sudden end.

The lady moved to the door with panther strides and threw it open for all the world like one of Mrs. Leslie Carter's last act farewells. Poising for a moment on a well-balanced toe, she murmured through tight lips: "You are a lousey cheapskate!" and bestowing a withering look at me inquired: "And who is your funny friend with the giraffe neck?"—and was gone. New York!

Down by dock warehouses at nightfall gather human flotsam and jetsam a great city beaches on friendless shoals. They light fires, cook Mulligan stews, suck at stub pipes—and stare. Later they stretch out under the open sky and cover themselves with newspapers. With dawn, like a bad dream, they vanish. The police know them as "waterfronters"—harmless drifters who bother no one.

A certain family in New York has moved eight times in 12 months because of being unable to find an apartment house that was neighborly. In desperation the husband has sold his business and is returning to a town of 10,000 in Illinois, where they formerly lived in great happiness.

I have lived in one hotel in New York for nine years and have slight nodding acquaintance with only two families living there. And they don't seem so eager about it.

William A. Brady has won and lost more fortunes than any other entertainment promoter on Broadway. His latest million is from his play, "Street Scene," or at least will reach that figure by mid-summer. Among potential millions he was offered but rejected were the plays "Within the Law," "Rain," and "Broadway."

Brady is said to be the heaviest cigar smoker in town. He often goes to sleep puffing one and upon awakening his first act is to light up. Save when he is eating there is scarcely a moment he is without his torch.

Prisco, the stuttering comic, is high up in the list of inveterate cigar smokers. And he puffs the strongest tobacco. "They would ga-ga-gag a bu-buzzard," he says.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

THE people employed where you work are not interested in your home affairs or your personal matters.

The bright sayings of your children, the new articles of furniture your new clothes or your troubles are not important to any one but yourself.

The party you had at your home or that you attended last evening, what was done and how are not matters to talk over in business hours.

One of the greatest bores is the one who is always referring to being entertained or having entertained those of a prominent or influential class.

As a matter of duty certain people will accept your invitations and hospitality as something in the way of diversion which will be different from what they usually enjoy. For business reasons certain persons favor you with their presence or even invite you to their homes.

Unless you are a member of their own special little home crowd you subject yourself to ridicule when you attempt to make others believe that you belong to their set.

The fellow worker who makes a practice of telling his associates all of his or her home affairs soon becomes a joke about the place especially if social events score high in importance.
